London, March 13.—In what was asserted to be the most smashing blow yet delivered by Britain's air arm against Germany, heavy forces of R. A. F. bombers last night rained bombs on Berlin, Bremen and Hamburg, as well as on other German-held bases extending all the way from Germany's capital through Holland, to Boulogne, in occupied France.

Huge fires broke out in Berlin after the concentrated R. A. F. pounding. The industrial area of Bremen was aflame and the bomber target at Hamburg, the dock area, was repeatedly hit by heavy bombs.

Effect "Electrifying" on Britons

The effect of the "Berlin raid" headlines on Britons was electrifying. Bad weather for the most part had prevented the R. A. F. from attacking Hitler's capital since December 20.

The Daily Mail tomorrow will say confidently, "We have ceased to be the hunted. We are the hunters. Today the R. A. F. was more aggressive than the German air force."

The official British announcement of the "very successful" raids, said: "In addition to the older types of aircraft of the bomber command, several new and more powerful units were again in action carrying British heavy bombs."

In daylight today large squadrons of British fighter planes continued the offensive action against the enemy across the English Channel. Watchers on the British side of the

Greece to Stand Firm, Minister Announces Here

Greece will stand firm and fight to repel any German attack, Greek Minister Timon Diamantopoulos announced yesterday.

Scotching rumors that Greece would bow to German demands and submit to a negotiated peace with Italy, the envoy declared:

"Passage of the lend-lease bill served to inspire and encourage the Greek people in their unshakable determination as recently announced by Prime Minister Korizis, to stand their ground and repel all aggression from whatever direction it may come."

President Roosevelt announced after signing the bill that an undisclosed amount of war materials would be sent to Greece at once.

Irish Police Seize 'Nazi Parachutist'

Dublin, March 13 (AP).—Guards at Taghmon, County Wexford, today arrested a stranger who said that he had landed by parachute during the night from a German plane at a town called Ballycullane in the same county, it was officially announced tonight.

There was no report of any forced landing by any plane in the district where he descended.

Fascist Thrust In Albania Loses Sting

Greek Destroyer Sinks Sub Trying To Attack Convoy

By International News Service

Athens, March 13.—Reports that the Italian offensive in Albania is tapering off due to huge losses coincided tonight with announcement that the Greek destroyer Phara sank an enemy submarine trying to attack an Allied convoy in the Aegean Sea.

The Greek admiralty did not state the nature of the convoy the Phara was escorting.

Advices from the central Albanian front, meanwhile, estimated the Italian losses in the past four days as high as 30,000, including men killed, wounded or captured.

Three Fascist divisions were said to have been wiped from the field since the Italians, under Premier Mussolini's personal command, launched a general offensive Sunday along a 28-mile sector in the area of Tepeleni.

Greek troops not only beat back wave after wave of Italian infantry but were said to have staged counterattacks that gained new mountain positions around the long-embattled road junction town of Tepeleni.

Italian prisoners were quoted as saying Mussolini was still somewhere on the Tepeleni front, spurring on his troops and commanders.

It was said Il Duce would remain in Albania until Saturday, when many Athens observers believe Adolf Hitler may launch his anticipated invasion of northeast Greece.

British bombers, giving strong support to the Greek troops, heavily bombed Italian forces and motor transports on the Glava-Buzi Road north of Tepeleni yesterday and all participating planes returned, the Athens Royal Air Force headquarters announced.

British Land, Belgrade Hears

Belgrade (Friday), March 14 (AP). Diplomatic circles heard today that about 30,000 British troops had been debarked at Piraeus, the port of Athens.

Belgrade reported this week that diplomats had unconfirmed reports of large British troop landings in Piraeus and Salonika, strategic Greek port at the head of the Aegean Sea.

London reported that it was "unable to reply."

Fires Light Skies As Luftwaffe Rains Bombs on Scottish City's Docks, Plants

By the Associated Press

Berlin (Friday), March 14.—The German Luftwaffe singled out Glasgow for its heaviest overnight raids, authorized sources said today.

The Scottish city's important war industries and its harbor were reported attacked by the strongest German units.

Reports wirelessed ahead from returning bombers said at least 20 huge fires were visible after the first wave of bombers passed.

(British acknowledged a raid hours long on a northeastern city last night and early today.)

Other units renewed the bombardment of Liverpool and Birkenhead, dropping explosives and incendiaries which "continued the work of destruction" started at these Mersey ports Wednesday night.

It also was reported that "effective" attacks have been directed since last evening against industrial sections, food storage plants and supply warehouses of a number of other Scottish and English cities.

The follow-up of the previous night's attacks came after the Germans had declared they had contrived new and sharper air and sea weapons for "the Battle of the Atlantic."

Wednesday night's hours-long attack on Liverpool coincided with deadly overnight raids carried out by the British on Berlin, Bremen and Hamburg. The German high command reported several hundred planes were sent against Liverpool.

At Cardiff, Wales, at least ten large fires were started and at London, the Purfleet docks were rocked by explosions, D. N. B. (German news agency) reported.

In addition, hangars, barracks and searchlight batteries of ten airdromes in middle and south England were declared by the agency to have been "effectively bombarded."

Bomb Hits U. S. Consulate

Informed quarters said the R.A.F. attackers killed 16 persons and injured 37 in its first raid on Berlin in 82 nights. Three were reported killed and three injured at Bremen and none at Hamburg. Only minor damage was acknowledged at all three places.

The building of the United States consul general at Hamburg was hit by a bomb, but no one was in it at the time. The consul's office and a staircase were damaged and many windows shattered.

Thirteen British planes were declared downed—ten of them over Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen—and the high command acknowledged the loss of six Nazi craft.

Airmen returning from Liverpool declared 10,000 explosive and fire bombs were dropped, damaging ships, grain elevators and storehouses.

"Hell broke loose on the Mersey," one pilot reported, adding that the city was left as an "ocean of flames."

The high command said a British destroyer was sunk by a speedboat off the English southeast coast and a merchantman was sunk and three others were hit in air attacks on

Honduras Ousts Nazi Envoy As an Agitator Against U. S.

By International News Service

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, March 13.—Accused of spreading Nazi propaganda and attempting to provoke trouble between Honduras and the United States, Christian Zinsser, German charge d'affaires in Honduras, was declared persona non grata tonight.

He will be compelled to leave the country immediately and presumably will return to Germany by way of Russia.

Zinser, a one-time storm trooper who saw service in Poland, was reported to have been the last German official to see Capt. Hans Langdorff of the ill-starred pocket battleship Grap Spee before the latter committed suicide after ordering his ship scuttled on instructions from Berlin.

Zinsser, a one-time storm trooper man legation in Montevideo, presumably carried to Langdorff the fateful orders from Adolf Hitler demanding that the Graf Spee, bested by inferior British cruisers in the only naval battle of the war in American waters, be sent to the bottom.

American residents of Tegucigalpa, which lies only 525 miles from the Panama Canal, praised the Honduran secret service for obtaining evidence indicating that Zinsser was operating beyond his diplomatic rights. He has long made it a practice to visit the 350 German residents of Honduras regularly. The government finally concluded that he had "conferred enough" with his compatriots.

Zinsser, it was said, originally was sent to South America to "steam up" Nazi diplomacy. After his assignment in Montevideo, he came to Tegucigalpa to work under German Minister Otto Ehlenbeck.

Aid Fund Bill May Be Law In 2 Weeks

House to Call Up Measure Tuesday; War, Army, Navy Heads Testify

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday unanimously agreed to call up the $7,000,000,000 British aid fund bill on Tuesday after the Secretaries of State, War and Navy gave a House committee unqualified indorsement of the two-year arms outlay.

On direction of his deficiencies appropriations subcommittee, Acting Chairman Woodrum asked and obtained consent of the House to debate the bill Tuesday and vote on Wednesday. House hearings will be rushed to conclusion today.

Senate leaders meanwhile tentatively agreed on a program that should make the aid grant the law of the land the week after next. A Senate subcommittee was expected to take action next weekend and speed the bill to the Senate on the following Monday.

All legislative traffic moved aside for the estimates that Secretaries Hull, Stimson and Knox told a House subcommittee should be approved in their present form. The three Cabinet heads and Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, testified in the secrecy of a closed committee session.

Woodrum later made a statement to newsmen in the presence of his subcommittee, and briefly answered questions.

He said the $7,000,000,000 was arrived at not by "guesswork" but on detailed information on needs submitted by British army, navy and air corps officials to corresponding departments of this Government.

British declarations of their requirements were analyzed by departmental experts which submitted their recommendations to the Budget Bureau in the customary way.

Information Dictated Figure

The Budget Bureau "looked at the whole picture" and arrived at the $7,000,000,000 figure, Woodrum added.

He said Hull, Knox and Stimson indorsed the bill "definitely and enthusiastically."

Did the Cabinet spokesmen consider the $7,000,000,000 adequate for the two-year program? Woodrum was asked.

"As the situation looks today, they think this is the amount that should be appropriated," he replied.

Would additional funds later be needed?

No one, Woodrum replied, was in a position to answer that question at this time.

As subcommittee hearings adjourned until today, Woodrum went before the House to ask right of way for the legislation on Tuesday.

Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, terming the bill "a $7,000,000,000 blank check to the President," said it would be useless to object as the bill would then be brought in under rule.

Michener asked if the committee would report the bill "as a unit or split it up." Woodrum said such amounts would be recommended as appeared justified by the testimony.

U. S. Building 6 Battle Cruisers As Reply to Japan; Roosevelt To Set Up Defense Strike Board

Hillman, Knudsen, Miss Perkins Confer At White House On Mediation Body

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A supermediation board, to handle strikes in defense industries, will be established by executive order within the next two or three days, it was learned reliably yesterday.

The board, which will probably be composed of 11 members, may later be given the long-range planning and other functions recently discussed by President Roosevelt as part of the proper functions of such a body, but initially, it was indicated, the prime purpose of the agency will be that of mediation.

Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board in the World War, was reported in some circles to have been decided on for membership on the board, with the names of William Davis, former head of the New York State Mediation Board; Dean Lloyd Garrison, of the University of Wisconsin Law School; George Meany, secretary-treasurer of the A. F. L., and George M. Harrison, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, also mentioned for membership.

The plan was presented to the President yesterday by William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, co-directors of the Office of Production Management, and Secretary of Labor Perkins.

After more than an hour's conference with the President, the ranking labor officials declined to make public the details of the plan and told reporters only that they were in complete agreement on its essentials.

Jobless to Be Registered

The Administration also acted yesterday to meet a different sort of labor problem by launching a Nation-wide registration drive among unemployed workers to mitigate a serious prospective labor shortage.

The latter plan, announced by Federal Security Administrator McNutt and to be initiated with a Nation-wide appeal of Hillman, seeks to have all the unemployed register with the U. S. Employment Service.

Significantly, all employed workers who have skills equipping them to hold jobs in aircraft manufacturing, shipbuilding and machine shop and machinery manufacturing industries, but whose present employment does not make use of these skills, were also asked to register with the Employment Service. The request was seen as the first step in a "voluntary priority" system to give defense industries first call on specially trained and qualified employes.

According to Social Security Board Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer, who explained the plan's purpose at a press conference, the drive is expected to result in an

Hoffman Asks Walter Reed Strike Probe

Loyalty to Union Put Above Loyalty to Their Country, House Told

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

A special Congressional investigation of union labor practices in Washington and their effect on the defense program was proposed yesterday by Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan.

Hoffman charged leaders of the striking American Federation of Labor workers at the Army Medical Center with placing "loyalty to their union above loyalty to their country."

The A. F. of L. has halted construction on the entire project, Hoffman said, because one contractor, Sam Merando, "employs men who are not willing to pay the union $57.50 to exercise their right to work."

Labor Department conciliators hinted last night at the possibility of a settlement today of the week-old strike at the center's Walter Reed Hospital.

Federal mediators declined to say what steps toward a strike settlement had been achieved. They said, however, the end of the dispute might come late today.

"Why grow eloquent in behalf of the democracies, so-called, of the Old World," Hoffman asked the House, "while Stalin's emissaries throughout the country and 14 business agents of the A. F. of L. here

House Passes Big Defense Housing Bill

$150,000,000 More Voted, but Members Oppose Refrigerators

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday passed the Administration bill to grant an additional $150,000,000 for "defense housing," but only after writing into the measure what was in effect a declaration against Government installation of electric refrigerators.

The bill would, if approved by the Senate, bring $467,099,987 the total sum authorized to provide living quarters for industrial workers on defense projects and for families of Army and Navy personnel.

The measure was agreed to without a record vote—and with perhaps 50 members on the floor—after adoption of an amendment submitted by Chairman Lanham of the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, sponsor of the bill, which provided that no "movable equipment" be installed at Government expense in the new houses unless the Federal Works Administrator "deem such installation in the public interest."

Meanwhile, Representative Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, testified at a House hearing in behalf of another Administration bill to provide $150,000,000 for "community facilities"—such as schools, sewers and water systems—for areas showing sudden increases in population

Answer to Japan

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Navy was officially disclosed yesterday to be building six battle cruisers—fast, powerful warships of radically new design—as a part of the $7,000,000,000 two-ocean fleet program.

This information was revealed by the House Appropriations Committee as it brought to the floor a $3,446,585,144 bill for support of the naval establishment next year. The committee included an official Navy table detailing the various types of ships under construction in the printed hearings on the bill.

No data was given as to characteristics of the battle cruisers, but the Navy estimated they would cost $53,400,000 each for hull and machinery alone. This would make the ships cost about $70,000,000 each complete—virtually the price of the 35,000-ton battleships now nearing completion.

To Have High Speed

On this basis, the battle cruisers should be vessels of at least 25,000 tons carrying as heavy as 14-inch guns, Naval experts estimated.

They are considered this Nation's answer to somewhat similar craft reported to be under construction in Japan. Vessels of this type have very high speed—well above 30 knots—which enables them to run away from the heavier armored and gunned battleships. Though lightly armored, they can catch and sink any other type of ship, including the

British Close Strait to Trap Fascists in Red Sea

By the Associated Press

London, March 13.—The admiralty announced today that the Small Strait of Bab El Mandeb at the southern end of the Red Sea was "dangerous to navigation."

Closure of the Small Strait leaves the British only one channel to watch to prevent any Italian ships in the Red Sea from escaping into the open ocean as the land pressure in Eritrea increases.

The admiralty declined to disclose how it blocked the small channel between Perim Island and the Arabian coast, but probably used mines.

Bab El Mandeb is divided by the British Island of Perim. The Small Strait, to the northeast, is about 2 miles wide. The Large Strait ranges from 9 to 16 miles in width.

By the United Press

Los Angeles, March 13.—The saga of Death Valley Scotty, the crusty, mysterious prospector whose fabulous exploits long have stemmed from legendary buried gold, was a 30-year investment in laughs which cost the investor $500,000.

The story came out in Federal Court today. Scotty—Walter Scott—himself exposed the fact that he had no mine and never did, despite his adventures at flinging money about since the turn of the century and presently keeping a $3,000,000 desert palace.

SCOTTY

Then his gray-haired partner, Albert M. Johnson, retired Chicago insurance broker, took the stand as a defense witness in a grubstake suit against Scotty.

"I've lent him a great deal of money over a 30-year period," Johnson testified, "and he's paid me back in laughs. I've been paying his bills for years and liking it.

"I bought the ground with Scotty's assistance, and then built the castle. He has a great appetite for money and I like to give it to him."

Johnson estimated that he had advanced Scotty $500,000, as investment in the prospector's enterprises, and also had a judgment so as to collect—in case Scotty ever "struck it rich."

New Skin Test Determines Pregnancy in Less Than Hour

By Willis Young
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago, March 13.—Development of a simple one-hour test for pregnancy, probably the most remarkable discovery of its kind ever made, was announced today by the University of Illinois College of Medicine.

The new method is a skin test, very much like those used for allergy such as hay fever. Besides indicating pregnancy in 30 minutes to an hour, it is easy to give and inexpensive.

The university reported it is 98 per cent reliable and detects pregnancy as early as two weeks.

The method in general use for the past decade has the same percentage of reliability but requires two days before results can be known. It also costs considerably more.

The skin test was developed by Dr. Frederick H. Falls, Dr. V. C. Freda and Dr. H. H. Cohen. Dr. William H. Welker acted as consultant.

The test consists of injecting into the skin of the forearm, with a fine hypodermic needle, a minute amount of colostrum, a watery liquid secreted in the breasts during pregnancy.

No reaction occurs if the woman is pregnant, but if she isn't the point of injection begins to look as if she had a mosquito bite. A reddish area 1 to 2 inches in diameter appears. This bump raises within an hour and disappears in four or five hours.

The colostrum contains a protein like those to which some persons are allergic. This protein is found in the breasts of almost all persons after puberty and all persons who aren't pregnant are sensitive to it.

Defense Plant Expansion Plan Is Under Way

Defense Chief William S. Knudsen yesterday disclosed that $12,575,869,000 of the contracts contemplated under the defense construction and procurement program already have been awarded and that to meet the unprecedented demand, a plant expansion program to cost about $2,138,000,000 has been begun.

At the same time the Office of Production Management revealed that plane deliveries during February reached the figure of 972, only slightly below the January total of 1,036, despite the shorter month.

Of the planes delivered during February, it was reported, 879 went to the Army, Navy and the British. The remainder were taken by "other governments and commercial airlines," the OPM announced.

Knudsen's figures were given to the OPM production division in an informal staff meeting.

Progress to Vary

Knudsen asserted that in the early production of defense equipment, "things will begin to roll" within the next three or four months. He explained, however, that the rates of progress in the different types of equipment will vary with Army and Navy decisions on which should have the greatest production effort.

The effect of the program on employment, Knudsen indicated, is shown in an increase of 1,445,000 persons on non-agricultural pay rolls between May, 1940, when the program began, and the end of January of this year.

As of March 1, 1941, plant expansion stimulated by the program included Government-financed construction involving 302 plants at an estimated cost of $1,574,000,000. The British government has financed 61 plants costing $171,000,000, and private American building, under liberalized amortization provisions, has involved expansion and construction of 421 plants costing $393,000,000, Knudsen said.

Subject of Negotiations

Those plants built by the British, however, it was announced yesterday by another high Administration official, are the subject of current negotiations by which they would be taken over by the Defense Plant Corporation, along with British contracts for war materials.

The official, who declined to be quoted by name, said that although the current negotiations would "in no way" relieve the British of the remainder of their obligations in this country, they would probably reduce their present total of $1,500,000,000 by between 20 and 25 per cent.

Under the program, he indicated, some $300,000,000 to $350,000,000 worth of plants and contracts would be taken over.

in Washington defy the Navy, hurl challenges at the Army and successfully stop work on Government projects?

"Neither group would last 15 minutes," he added, "if politicians who control the Army and the Navy would get their dirty, traitorous fingers from the throats of Army and Navy officials."

The Hoffman resolution calls for appointment of a five-man committee to determine whether union membership is a prerequisite for employment on any projects within the District relating to the national defense program and to obtain other information "that would aid Congress in any necessary remedial legislation."

Hoffman two months ago introduced legislation to outlaw the closed shop in plants with defense contracts.

The purpose of the proposed investigation is "to lay bare before the public the whole rotten situation," he said yesterday.

The scope of the inquiry is limited to Washington, he explained, because "it was thought that members might feel more free to vote for an investigation to expose groups and racketeering here in the Nation's Capital, if such investigations did not touch their home districts."

additional 1,000,000 to 1,500,000 names on the Employment Service's active rolls, already 5,000,000 strong.

Altmeyer declared that while at present no defense industry was seriously handicapped by lack of trained employes, there were tight situations in about 30 defense occupations. By next summer, he frankly admitted, there will be a shortage. By having every available worker registered, he explained, demands of defense industries for specialized skills can be met in the speediest and most orderly manner.

The fields where labor shortages are threatening most seriously, he added, are those of highly specialized skills necessary in machine shops, shipyards and airplane plants. The occupations include marine architects, gauge makers, precision tool makers, dye setters, loftsmen, coppersmiths and many varieties of shipbuilders and airplane makers.

Of the 5,000,000 unemployed workers now on the Employment Service's rolls, Altmeyer said, about 15 per cent are classed as skilled, but only 185,000 are skilled in the approximately 400 categories of defense occupations. At the present rate of job placements, he added, and in the light of the anticipated demand of those industries which have listed their needs for the next 60 days, the Employment Service can meet all requirements in sight over the next month or two save those in the 30 "tight" classifications.

400,000 Placed Monthly

Altmeyer noted that the service is placing workers at the rate of about 400,000 a month. At this tempo, he inferred, the Employment Service may soon find itself unable to meet the demand.

The Social Security chief denied that any plan of "labor priorities" was under consideration. He admitted, however, that in asking for the registration of specially skilled workers who were employed but not using their skills in their present jobs, the purpose was to encourage the men to take positions in defense industries.

It was inferred that the information on the location of these workers would serve as the basis of a more ambitious plan in the future to give defense factories first call on this source of skilled labor if their demands cannot be met otherwise.

Despite the move for a mediation board, Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, continued to urge immediate enactment of legislation to restrict strikes in defense industries.

Testifying before the House Judiciary Committee investigating defense labor problems, he declared that such strikes during 1940 and up to the middle of February of this year had resulted in the loss of 8,817,360 man hours of labor, or about the amount required to build 325 planes.

Vinson discarded as "impractical" plans for "cooling off periods" suggested recently to Congress by Knudsen and Assistant Secretary of War Patterson.

"When employes at Wright Field in Dayton, Ohio, and employes at Walter Reed Hospital here refuse to pay any heed to the personal urgings of the President of the United States—a President under whose Administration labor has made more gains than in the whole history of the United States—it does not seem likely that a board created by Executive order and, of necessity, having less prestige than the President himself, will be able at this time to secure any more cooperation from the two factions of the labor movement," Vinson said.

but added:

"In fairness, I think I ought to state that it would undoubtedly be for the full amount—$7,000,000,000 in cash."

Immediately following conclusion of House hearings today, the deficiency subcommittee was expected to act on the bill.

It was indicated the bill would be approved substantially as the estimates were presented by Budget Director Smith, with the full sum broken down into flexible earmarkings for various categories of aid.

While a Republican "appropriate-as-you-go" effort was initiated in the Senate, Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the House committee, said he was considering no amendment of this character in the House.

Taft Proposition

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, when the bill reaches the Senate, may propose that the aid amounts be appropriated on a fiscal-year basis instead of for the duration of the life of the bill.

"That is how we make all of our own appropriations, and there is no need for distinction here," said Taft. "We could decide how much we are going to appropriate in the next fiscal year, and authorize contracts for the rest."

Taft, who originally criticized the size of the estimates as impairing the effectiveness of the Byrd purse-string amendment, said that as submitted by the President, with earmarkings for each class of aid, the proposal was "less objectionable."

Republican pledges of co-operation with the Administration in the British aid effort continued in the Senate, where Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania told his colleagues:

"Since Monday's session the lend-lease bill has become the law of the land with the President's signature and we are all bound to support it as loyal Americans."

Davis, who voted against the lend bill, quoted Decatur's words: "My country, in her intercourse with other nations, may she ever be right, but right or wrong, my country."

Davis followed the lead of Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan in citing that 90 out of 95 Senators voted for aid to England when votes for the bill and the Taft substitute were pooled.

William S. Knudsen, in charge of defense production, will go before the House deficiencies appropriations subcommittee today as the House group winds up hearings on aid financing. Other witnesses will include Budget Director Harold D. Smith, Gen. Marshall, Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and other Army and Navy officials.

Woodrum said details on defense articles to be supplied Britain in each aid category were not presented to the subcommittee yesterday, nor were the British government's own estimates submitted. This may be developed today, but Woodrum said it would not immediately be made public.

Supply Report Sought

Copyright by New York Times

Canberra, Australia, March 13.—Acting Prime Minister A. W. Fadden has asked Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister to the United States, to report on the likely supplies of war material obtainable from the United States under the aid-to-Britain bill, and also the effect of its provisions empowering the United States Government to send foodstuffs to Britain.

Australia at present is the principal supplier of dairy produce, such as butter, cheese and eggs, large American transfers of which would detrimentally affect Australian economy.

Dixie Dugan's 'Daddy,' McEvoy, Here for Material

The man responsible for "Dixie Dugan" is in town, and if his face looks strangely familiar it may be because he's also the model for one of the characters in The Post's comic strip. In real life he's J. P. McEvoy, novelist, playwright and homorist-at-large; in the comic strip he appears as Mr. Brudway, a literary gentleman for whom Dixie types manuscripts.

McEvoy blames Mr. Brudway on H. J. Striebel, his artist-collaborator. "Striebel's just ribbing me," he says; "he thinks it's pretty funny." Dixie herself is a character from McEvoy's first novel, "Show Girl." She appeared first in serial form, then in a book, later in a show, a motion picture, and now, a comic strip. She's almost as versatile as her creator, who claims he's written everything from epitaphs to tomato can labels.

McEvoy, who, with his wife, is stopping at the Mayflower, is no stranger to Washington, yet every time he comes he finds a different city, he says. "The only thing that stays the same is that you won't admit you have snowstorms. You get one every year, and every year you act surprised. Makes me think of the mayor out West who refused to buy a snow plow for the town. His reason was: 'Why should we? The damn stuff always melts.'"

Both he and his wife, Peggy McEvoy, are here in the interest of literature. He's writing a series of articles on national defense figures for the Readers' Digest; she is gathering material about Washington for her Ladies' Home Journal column, "Give and Take."

Hunter Went to Big Game, Jones Says

By the Associated Press

Representative Jones (Republican), Ohio, charged yesterday that Howard O. Hunter, recently nominated to be commissioner of the Works Projects Administration, had "spent the greater part of his time for 5½ years traveling at Government expense."

Jones told the House that the report of a WPA investigating committee disclosed bad administration about which WPA officials did nothing.

He declared that the report showed that Hunter "managed to make New Orleans for holidays, football games, and the like."

"The record shows Hunter's official travel led the way to Kentucky for the annual Derby, and to other places in the United States where important sporting events took place. . . .

"The committee report showed that Hunter spent 1,416 days as a traveler between August 1, 1934, and January 31, 1940, 71 per cent of the time."

because of the defense program.

Pointing to the "abnormal growth" of the Washington metropolitan area, Representative Sasscer said that some of the Prince Georges County increase was directly attributable to the Washington Navy Yard and other local defense activities.

He declared that in a survey taking three Prince Georges schools at random, of 178 new children registered from out State since September, 109 were children of parents who had moved to the area because of defense work.

Federal Assistance Necessary

Communities with limited tax facilities, said Representative Sasscer, are confronted with so great an overload that they are financially unable to carry on without Federal assistance.

He cited the naval powder factory at Indianhead, Md., as an example of "terrific expansion" necessitating new facilities. Other "abnormal situations," he declared, have been created because of the increase of personnel at Camp Meade, at Annapolis and at the Coast Guard establishment at Curtis Bay.

Facilities for houses erected solely for defense workers and new military and naval personnel—structures that will be torn down after the emergency—should be paid for by the Federal Government, he suggested.

The $150,000,000 bill for new living quarters passed by the House received indorsement from Democrats and Republicans alike, who expressed satisfaction that such "frills" as mechanical refrigerators would be generally omitted from the projected structures.

"It is the sense of this Congress that economy shall be practiced in the construction of these houses," asserted Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma. "And that means galvanized rather than copper pipes and no brass-finished hardware."

The measure had been held up in the House Rules Committee for ten days because of a fear on the part of several members that electric iceboxes and ranges would be installed in the new houses by the Government.

The committee allowed the bill to reach the House floor after Carmody had promised by letter not to install the refrigerators except when "absolutely necessary, and in no instance except where costs would be fully covered by additional rental charges."

The measure is expected to provide for dwelling units for 44,900 families and 1,400 single persons. Under various previous authorizations (totaling $327,099,987), 72,251 family dwelling units and 2,455 single units have been provided for defense workers and military and naval personnel.

President Freezes Hungarian Funds In This Country

President Roosevelt yesterday ordered that all funds of Hungary in this country be immediately immobilized, or "frozen."

Acting on recommendation of the State Department, the Treasury issued the order which puts under American supervision any transactions in Hungary's $500,000 of long-term investments here and their small, undetermined amount of short-term funds.

Secretary of State Hull said at his press conference that Hungary comes within the category of nations "like Rumania," which is now garrisoned by German troops.

Americans hold Hungarian bonds with a nominal value of $43,000,000, the Commerce Department said, and have direct investments in Hungary valued at $9,000,000.

The order applied to Hungary was previously invoked against France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxemburg, Norway, Denmark, Rumania, Bulgaria, Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia. The last three are under Russian domination, the others under German influence.

Ford Company Denies Union Shut Down Mill

Reports of a brief shutdown at the Ford Motor Co.'s River Rouge plant in Michigan yesterday were disputed, but there was evident a tightening in the dispute in which the C. I. O. seeks a Ford contract.

A union spokesman said there had been a brief stoppage by 3,000 workmen in a rolling mill who demanded reinstatement of eight employes who they said had been discharged for union activity. The union spokesmen said the eight were rehired and work resumed. Company officials conceded there had been a controversy and police were called, but denied the mill was shut down.

Meanwhile, Frank H. Bowen, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board, announced March 24 as the tentative date for a hearing on the C. I. O. petition for a collective bargaining election at the Ford plants.

Other Labor Fronts

Labor troubles in many other areas continued yesterday to handicap defense industries.

Developments:

Oakland, Calif.—General Motors truck assembly plant workers—100 strong—vote tonight on a "lieup." The dispute arose over the "behavior" of a new superintendent. The plant manufactures 35 Army trucks a day.

Everett, Wash.—Work on a $5,000,000 Army Air Corps base ceased as union carpenters protested against delivery of lumber from a mill which A. F. L. officials termed "unfair." Seventy-five other works were affected by the cessation.

Buffalo.—A six-hour meeting between Steel Workers Organizing Committee representatives and Federal Conciliator Thomas M. Finn resulted in announcement of a parley today between Bethlehem Steel Corporation officials and S. W. O. C. delegates. They will seek to avert a new threatened strike in the Bethlehem Lackawanna plant, scene of a two-day walkout last month.

Elizabeth, N. J.—A strike of 1,500 workers at the General Instrument Corporation plant stalled work on radio equipment of the Navy.

C. I. O. Calls Off Strike Vote

West Orange, N. J.—A threatened strike in five of the seven plants of the Thomas A. Edison Industries was averted when C. I. O. officials postponed indefinitely a strike vote.

Pittsburgh.—Four departments of the American Bridge Co. stopped work when C. I. O. members refused to work alongside nonunion employes.

Springfield, Ohio.—A strike of 50 workers in the crane and hoist department tied up national defense orders at Robbins & Myers, Inc.

ASCAP, 45 Associates Fined $35,250

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, March 13.—The Government's campaign to break the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers' grip on the Nation's music ended in Federal Court today with imposition of $35,250 in fines on the society, its 26 leaders and 19 music publishing houses.

All pleaded nolo contendere to violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Judge F. Ryan Duffy fined ASCAP $5,000; levied $1,500 fines on Gene Buck, president; E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee, and John G. Paine, general manager; fined 23 other ASCAP officials $500 each, and fined the corporations $750 each.

The Government's bill of criminal information charged ten specific violations of the antitrust law, including conspiracy to pool and control desirable copyrighted music available for commercial use and maintain a monopoly.

Disposition of the criminal case followed by only a few weeks the signing of a consent decree whereby ASCAP would desist from practices held by the Government to be objectionable.

A similar decree was entered into previously by Broadcast Music, Inc., rival of ASCAP, the Columbia Broadcasting System and the National Broadcasting Co.

Because of a controversy with the two radio chains, ASCAP music has been missing from their network programs since January 1.

Addressing the court as special defense counsel, Lieut. Gov. Charles Poletti of New York, expressed conviction peace soon would come to the music industry. Asked that the case be closed speedily "so these men can return (to their New York and Hollywood headquarters) and continue to enrich the public" with their music.

Victor O. Waters, special assistant to the Attorney General, argued against jail sentences.

Individuals who were present and fined in addition to Buck, Mills and Paine, were Louis Bernstein, Otto A. Harbach, George W. Meyer, Gustav Schirmer, J. J. Bergman, Irving Caesar, Fred E. Ahlert, Saul Bornstein, Max Dreyfus, Walter Fisher, Edgar Leslie, Jack Mills, Herman Starr, John O'Connor, Deems Taylor, Will von Tilzer and Oscar Hammerstein 2d.

George Fischer, Raymond Hubbell, Jerome Kern and Oley Speaks were ill and could not appear. J. J. Robbins was reported in Cuba and John Mercer was reported delayed on his way from California.

Roosevelt Names Three Men To Coordinate Relief Activities

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday named a three-man committee on privately-financed war and domestic relief which, in effect, will have power to plan priorities for relief activities.

At the same time he served implied warning that the plea of France's Vichy government for increased United States food supplies will not be answered for the present.

Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Belgium and chairman of the 1941 Inaugural committee, was asked to serve as chairman.

Charles P. Taft, of Cincinnati, serving now as assistant coordinator for health, welfare and related defense activities, is the second member.

Dr. Frederick P. Keppel, president of the Carnegie Corporation, New York City, completes the committee.

The committee was created at the suggestion of Secretary of State Hull, who told the President by letter that there is a need for "greater coordination" of private relief activities, especially of British relief.

Hull's letter also contained an implicit shrug at the threat of France's Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan to convoy food ships to the United States with units of the French fleet.

Noting that the Red Cross is sending supplies to Great Britain, China, Greece, Finland and Spain, Hull said "in many other countries of Europe, economic and military controls as well as limitations upon transportation and communication facilities make effective relief operation impracticable at the present time."

Hull complained to the President that private relief organizations which have collected more than $20,000,000 since September, 1939, are in many cases "raising funds without full knowledge of the relief sources already at hand, the needs which actually require relief, or the shipping available for the transportation of relief materials."

Reminding the President in a letter that about 300 private agencies now are registered with the State Department for the purpose of collecting funds, Hull called attention to the dominant role of the American Red Cross in the relief picture.

Hull's recommendation to the President was interpreted as warning that private solicitation of funds may be strictly regulated, that shipping space for war relief supplies is to be allotted on a system of priorities, and that in all likelihood the shipments of the Red Cross will be given precedence.

The need for coordination of British relief is already acute, Hull said, "where the problem of obtaining shipping space for the transportation of relief materials is already serious and requires discriminating knowledge as to the needs existing and as to the most effective method of meeting them."

President Roosevelt's letter inviting the three men to serve on the committee asked them to make recommendations on the subject and to arrange to meet in Washington "at an early date."

Hull based his plea for coordination not only on the growing amount of solicitation of funds for war sufferers, but also on the rise of relief activity at home.

Hull said "it seems likely" that the concern of the American people to provide for the needs of young men called for military training will complicate the problem.

"We are also informed," Hull added, that some of our people are planning to begin campaigns to finance activities in areas adjacent to military camps established under the Selective Service Act."

"All of these efforts are inspired by the finest human instinct," Hull said, but he warned "there is growing danger that they may be frustrated if they are conducted without proper regard to one another and without proper coordination."

The Hull letter of March 3, basis for the President's action, made no direct mention if unoccupied France and its frequent requests for food, transmitted through Ambassador Gaston Henry-Haye.

Norwegian Relief, Inc., it was learned, has secured release of frozen funds from the Treasury to finance shipments of prefabricated houses from Sweden into Norway to shelter Norwegians whose homes were bombed during last spring's Nazi invasion.

A sum of about $75,000 has been sent to Sweden by the organization, it was said, to pay for prefabricated dwellings made of wood, a Swedish specialty, which are being shipped into Norway. The order was on a trial basis. Swedish citizens, it was said, have been sending prefabricated houses to Norway for many months.

The houses are of modest size, averaging three or four rooms each.

OPM Cuts Off Aluminum for Pots and Pans

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, March 13.—The chief of the Government's defense contract service declared today that "ordnance produced too late may be used by our adversaries," demanded "more acceptable defense materials in less time," and disclosed the aluminum utensil industry has been told it is "out of business."

The production-management official, Robert L. Mehornay, addressed a closing session of the Cleveland speed-armament conference—warned by another speaker that industry will feel "the real pinch" of a labor shortage by late August or early September.

"Materials produced in time will be of use and strategic value to us, and those which are produced too late may be used by our adversaries," Mehornay said.

Spreading the work, getting more bidders and more subcontractors can solve the time element of the Nation's defense problem, he declared.

Total May Be 50 Billions

Mehornay said Army and Navy contracts aggregating well over $10,000,000,000 already have been awarded and there was no indication what the total would be—"it may be $50,000,000,000."

"Before our present preparation the Army bought some 500 machine guns per year, of .50 caliber. Before this year is out they will be buying 5,000 per month," he added.

"All-out" participation of industry in defense will forestall the danger of "too great concentration of production in certain areas," and relieve processors already loaded to full capacity for months ahead, Mehornay said.

Before his address Mehornay told newsmen that 60 members of the Aluminum Utensils Manufacturers' Association had been advised they would not be able to get any aluminum after they use supplies now on hand.

About 21,000 workers in the aluminum kitchen utensil field will be made idle or forced into defense work by the restriction, Mehornay estimated. He expressed belief airplane manufacturers would subcontract with the pots-and-pans makers.

Death Valley Scotty Explodes a Legend

of collecting his money. He explained to reporters that he had known Scotty for more than 35 years. In 1905, when Johnson was very ill, Scotty persuaded him to visit Death Valley, and he felt he owed the prospector something for helping restore his health.

Johnson first disclosed that he was Scott's backer and financial guardian four years ago when the prospector was sued for support by his wife, Mrs. Ella Josephine Scott. But the partnership details were not revealed until today's suit in which Julian M. Gerard, New York financier and brother to the former United States Ambassador to Germany, asked 22½ per cent of the gold Scotty had found since 1902 when Gerard grubstaked him.

Gerard will testify tomorrow on how he came to advance Scotty money to seek a gold mine.

Attorney Leonard Wilson, wiwth a few questions, removed the mystery that has surrounded Scott since 1905 when the desert character chartered a special Sante Fe train for a trip to New York and set a transcontinental train record of 57 hours 54 minutes, which stood for more than 30 years.

"Have you ever owned any rich mining property?" Wilson asked.

"Nope," laconically answered Scott.

"Have you a mine now?"

"No."

"Did you ever sell any gold?"

"No."

"How much money has Johnson given you?"

"I don't keep any books," Scott drawled, "and I don't know how much, but it was a lot."

"It Isn't True," He Says

Attorney Wilson then asked Scott if he had ever made any statements that he had "large caches of gold" in the hills.

"I may have told them anything," Scott laughed. "I don't remember and it isn't true, anyway."

Federal Judge Benjamin Harrison then asked Scott what he had done with the $10,000 which Gerard claimed he had advanced him.

"I bought a lot of mules and other equipment," he said. "I didn't keep any books. After all, that was more than 35 years ago."

Scott said that he did try to find gold when grubstaked by Gerard, declaring he prospected almost every section of Death Valley going to points so remote they were "more than 150 miles from a town by jackass."

The chunky desert prospector bristled angrily when pressed for further details on his expenditure of Gerard's funds, snorting:

"If I want to rob anyone, I'll get a gun and do it right."

Just before the hearing, Scott dropped his mysterious pose he has used for years, never admitting he had a gold mine but always hinting he might have some hidden source of wealth.

"Sure," he said to reporters, "I ain't got no mine. A mine in the legal sense is a spot legally recorded an' set forth in county records. Thar ain't no such thing with Scotty's name on it. So I ain't got no mine."

The 65-year-old miner appeared in court with a black eye, which he said he received when a mule called Gold Dust tried to "kiss" him.

Earlier in the hearing, Scott identified his signature on the grubstake contract, although he claimed he could not recall whether he received $10,000 or $2,000 from Gerard.

"I got some money from Gerard, probably more than $2,000—I don't remember the exact amount—but I sent it back to him and I thought that was the end of it."

Following Scott's testimony that he had no mine or gold, Judge Harrison commented:

"It looks like the man from the desert took the man from the city down the line."

Lewis Proposal to Keep Mines Open During Talks Is Rejected

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—A proposal by John L. Lewis to keep the Nation's soft coal mines running pending settlement of differences between management and labor was rejected by major bituminous operators today shortly after they also rejected miners' demands for blanket wage increases and improved working conditions.

These developments created at least a temporary impasse in biennial contract negotiations for nearly 450,000 members of the United Mine Workers of America (C. I. O.) in the eight-State Appalachian area. The joint conference then named subcommittees to thresh out miners' demands and operators' counterproposals in an effort to reach a new contract replacing the one expiring March 31.

The committees—four men from each side—will begin joint discussions tomorrow while the general conference remains in recess to await reports.

Operators said they rejected the no-work stoppage proposals because the Lewis resolution stipulated that any wage increases or better working conditions agreed upon after the present contract expires be retroactive from next April 1.

Charles O'Neill, of New York, spokesman for operators, said this stipulation could impose upon operators a "contingent liability running into many millions of dollars."

He accused Lewis of not offering the resolution in good faith and declared that the president of the U. M. W. A. was attempting to attract favorable public opinion through such an offer.

Lewis immediately denied O'Neil's assertions and exclaimed that the U. M. W. A. believed it was making a contribution to public welfare and national defense.

Lewis added that he and union leaders had been approached by utilities, national defense industrialists and others urging miners to adopt some sort of formula to keep the mines open.

Earlier, operators asked miners to agree to continue the present contract for two more years. Operators said they were rejecting union pleas for a $1-a-day blanket wage increase, paid vacations, a guaranteed 200-day work year and numerous other requests.

Mine Inspection By U. S. Approved

Annual Federal inspection of all coal mines was approved by the House yesterday without an opposition vote.

The measure, by Representative Flannery (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, now goes to the Senate, which approved a somewhat similar inspection bill in January, 1940, and sent it to the House, where it died in committee.

The United Mine Workers Union has urged Federal inspections as a means of preventing accidents. Representatives of the National Coal Association have denied annual inspections would prevent mine accidents, and asserted they would be duplication of work of State mining departments.

The Gallup Poll

American Public Attitude Toward Japan Stiffens as Matsuoka Heads for Berlin

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., March 13.—The Japanese Foreign Minister's visit next week to Berlin—which observers think may be the prelude to a new Japanese move in the Orient—raises afresh the question:

What should the United States do if Japan tries to attack the Dutch East Indies or Singapore? Are we willing to risk war with the Japanese?"

Surveys of public opinion by the Institute on that vital question indicate a marked trend of sentiment in the comparatively short period of a few weeks—a trend which points to a stiffening attitude toward Japan. There has been a notable decline, the survey shows, in the number of American voters who oppose fighting Japan if necessary to stop her southward expansion.

The trend is evidenced in the following surveys, one made in February and the other just completed by the Institute. In both surveys the same question was asked:

"Do you think the United States should risk war with Japan, if necessary, to keep Japan from taking the Dutch East Indies and Singapore"

	Feb.	Today
Yes	39%	40%
No	46	39
Don't know	15	21

It is clear from the table that an important thing has happened in the one-month period.

Whereas in February the predominant sentiment was against risking war with Japan, today that is not the case. Today the group willing to risk war is slightly greater numerically than the group opposed to the gamble of war in the Orient.

This study, and others conducted by the Institute in recent months on Japanese question, indicates that Japanese wooing of the Axis is not regarded with indifference by the American public—that the closer the Japanese draw the Axis, the stiffer becomes the attitude of the American voter.

His reasons, as determined by an analysis of comments in the survey, are that (1) we have too many interests in the Pacific to allow Japan to get a stronger foothold there, and (2) that Japan has the same ideas of plunder and aggression as Hitler.

The group opposed to any showdown between the United States and Japan argue, on the other hand, that "we should fight one battle only—the battle to save England." They believe that "Hitler is only using Japan as a tool to divert our attention to the Pacific."

The strongest anti-Japanese feeling was found in the Far West. Whereas sentiment for risking war with Japan averaged less than 40 per cent in all other geographical areas, the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast States—those nearest to Japan—voted 53 per cent in favor of such risk.

Men of draft age throughout the country showed no marked difference from all men in their attitude. Among draft age males the vote was 46 per cent opposed, and 18 per cent no opinion.

Japan Tightens Shipping Curb In South China

Copyright by New York Times

Shanghai, March 13.—Further tightening of the Japanese blockade of the Chinese coast, and also further restrictions on foreign trade, were reported here today when it was revealed that the Japanese military authorities in South China have established an office on the Portuguese colony of Macao, where all seaborne traffic must obtain permits.

Under the newly promulgated Japanese regulations all shipping, including junks, tugs, small steamers and launches, plying along the South China, and especially the Kwangtung, coast must obtain permits and flags before sailing.

These permits specify the ownership of the vessels and the cargo carried, and the flags are those of Wang Ching-wei's (Japanese-controlled) Nanking regime. Apparently any and all cargoes except arms, ammunition, gasoline and machine oils are being permitted, although a definite scale of "fees" instituted must be paid to Japanese headquarters at Macao before permits will be issued.

Any vessel found without proper permits or the appropriate flag is liable to be sunk by Japanese patrol warships operating in South China waters.

Japan's new restrictions apparently will not apply to Soviet Russia because Germany, Japan's Axis partner, must maintain the most friendly relations with Russia to get much-needed raw materials to carry on the European conflict.

It is reported here from most reliable sources that the latest Soviet-Thailand exchange of consular and trade officials was engineered principally by Germany so that she would be able to acquire raw materials from Thailand. In fact, Germany is using Russia as a mere middleman to purchase the needed supplies, ship them to Vladivostok, and thence by way of the Trans-Siberian Railway to eventual German destinations.

Incidentally, the arrival of additional Soviet ships here in Shanghai for badly needed repairs, due to long tieups at Vladivostok, and their quick overhaul and restoration to service indicate that Russia is not only taking advantage of high freight rates for substantial profits, but is also following Germany's desires in the delivery of needed Far Eastern raw materials.

Berlin Grows Impatient as Yugoslavs Talk

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, March 13.—Like men lost in a maze, leaders of this World War-born kingdom conferred for hours today in an effort to find a way to appease Germany without lashing their nation to the Berlin-Rome-Tokyo Axis.

Chief Regent Prince Paul and Premier Cvetkovic locked themselves in conferences in Deinje Palace's study, but what conclusions they reached were not disclosed.

Earlier, Cvetkovic conferred with Dr. Vladimir Macek, leader of the Croations and lesser politicians.

In German quarters in Belgrade there were reports that Berlin was growing impatient for Yugoslavia's decision and might demand a quick reply to the "invitation to join the Axis."

Leaders of the Yugoslav army of a million still talk some of the possibility of military resistance, but political leaders in answer point to the map showing five Axis countries ringing Yugoslavia.

"Fight or die" advocates insist, however, that the army might carry on guerrilla warfare from the Serbian mountains, where blitzkrieg tactics would be of little value.

These arguments seemed to have changed the situation little from yesterday's report that Yugoslavia had agreed "in principle" to the German demands.

Prince Paul apparently was seeking to back into the Axis camp without so offending pro-British and Greek sentiment that his regime would fall, thus inviting a firmer German grip on the nation.

Forecasts Turkish Aid

Istanbul, March 13 (U.P.).—Shukru Esmer, political editor of the semi-official newspaper Ulus, declared in a radio address tonight that if Yugoslavia "resists German aggression . . . Turkey will fulfill her obligations by aiding Greece and Yugoslavia effectively."

He said that the expected speech of Premier Saydam on Turkey's policy, had been delayed indefinitely "because of the instability of the Balkan situation." Saydam had been scheduled to address the Turkish National Assembly.

Esmer described the situation in Yugoslavia as particularly unstable. He declared that if Yugoslavia, on the other hand, adheres to the tripartite pact "Turkey will consider herself freed from any obligation toward her."

CAA Official Urges Noiseless Propellers, Motors

Ralph S. White, Civil Aeronautics Administration official, last night asked airplane motor manufacturers to "save our nerves" by eliminating plane motor and propellor noises.

White, one of the speakers at opening sessions in the Washington Hotel of the national aeronautical meeting of the Society of Automotive Engineers, described as "myths" contentions that such noises cannot be eliminated. He also called for a "virtual barrage" of educational literature aimed at coordinating the air safety efforts of the industry, aircraft operators and the Government.

Speakers yesterday included Ford L. Prescott, senior mechanical engineer of the Army Air Corps power plant laboratory at Wright Field, Ohio; Fred E. Weick, chief engineer for the Engineering and Research Corporation; Thomas B. Rhines, propeller expert, and Ernest F. Fiock, of the Bureau of Standards.

A paper prepared for today's session by Paul Baker, United Aircraft Corporation, on "Development of a New Lateral Control Arrangement" was withdrawn at the request of the War Department, a society official disclosed. The meeting will close with a banquet tonight.

Nazis Say Jew Caused Willkies To Quit Reich

By the Associated Press

Berlin, March 13.—The German press today gave prominent position to stories alleging that a Jew was responsible for Wendell L. Willkie's grandfather leaving Germany.

The Berliner Zeitung said vital statistics of the town of Aschersleben, indicated the grandfather was forced to emigrate because he and his family had been cheated by a Jew.

DNB's Story

DNB said Willkie's family was traced in an effort to refute a statement by the American that his grandparents migrated to the United States as a protest against tyranny.

The Berliner Zeitung said Willkie's grandfather was Joseph Wilhelm Willcke, a copper-smith who had hoped to carry on business in his deceased father's shop.

A family disagreement arose over the will, the newspaper said, whereupon the widow sold the property to a Jewish neighbor named Bernhard Gerson.

The article detailed an involved financial transaction in which, it was alleged, the widow received none of the purchase money, but was dispossessed.

"Willcke had enough," the account continued, and "August 14, 1860, he embarked alone on the steamer Bavaria in Hamburg for America."

"Incredible," Says Willkie

In New York yesterday Willkie said in a statement:

"I never heard of the story and to me it is incredible.

"I do not pretend to have devoted any time to studying family history. If the talk I heard as a boy at home is correct, my grandfather came to the United States in 1848 as a result of the democratic revolution of that year, later returned to Germany for a few years, married and then returned to the United States in 1860, where he lived until he died. These things I know only generally by family tradition."

However, Willkie went on, "I do know as a fact that my grandfather taught my father a deep and abiding hatred of German autocracy and militarism, a passionate love of liberty, and a warm and sympathetic understanding of the problems of the Jewish people and of all minority groups."

Ann Sheridan Ends Strike, Gets 'Mere' $600

Hollywood, March 13 (U.P.).—Ann Sheridan, the "oomph girl" of the movies, tonight ended her six-month holdout against Warner Brothers studio. She agreed to return to work for the "mere" $600 a week she received last year when she walked off the studio lot and said she was through unless she got more money.

R.A.F. Pounds At Italian Isle of Rhodes

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, March 13.—Heavy bombing attacks Wednesday night on three airdromes on the Italian-fortified Island of Rhodes, largest of the Dodecanese, were reported tonight by the R. A. F.

It was the third straight night Rhodes had been raided.

The communique said a large formation of bombers made the attack, and also dropped bombs on targets on the second largest of the islands, Scarpanto.

Describing the attack on Rhodes, the British said that at Martiza all bombs fell on airdrome runways or among hangars, with several explosions caused by incendiaries. One fire started by the bombs was visible 20 miles away. At Calato and Kattavia, the communique said, "all bombs fell on airdromes."

"All our aircraft returned safely," the communique added.

The Middle East Command announced that in Italian Somaliland British forces continued to advance "in all sectors."

In Libya, where London military circles said there "possibly" were parts of three German divisions, a general headquarters communique said there was "nothing of importance to report."

From Nairobi the British reported that their Ethiopian allies had captured Yavello, oft-bombed Italian stronghold 100 miles inside southwest Ethiopia.

A. R. A. F. communique reported attacks Tuesday on parked Italian planes at Asmara, capital of Eritrea, and machine-gun raids on freight trains between Asmara and Cheren, mountain stronghold 42 miles northwest of the capital.

convoys off the British east coast.

Simultaneously, the authoritative commentary Dienst aus Deutschland asserted that 9,000,000 tons of British shipping space had been sunk by German armed forces since the beginning of the war.

Exaggeration Charged

The British have charged that German figures on British losses have been exaggerated, sometimes as much as 100 per cent. An Associated Press tabulation of all ships sunk since the start of the war—gathered independently and listed by name—shows a total of 1,384 vessels aggregating 5,148,218 tons have been destroyed—including British, Allied, Axis and neutral vessels.

By the Associated Press

London (Friday), March 14.—Five German bombers were reported shot down by British ground defenses overnight as relays of raiders returned for widespread attacks.

The Nazi Luftwaffe roared over Liverpool for a second successive night attack but its heaviest raids seemed to be concentrated on a northeastern British town where scream bombs like those used in France last year added to the din. (Berlin said Glasgow was under heavy attack.)

U. S. Cheered in Marseilles As Red Cross Ship Docks

By G. H. Archambault.

Copyright by New York Times

Marseilles, France, March 13.—Hundreds of French school children, waving the Stars and Stripes and the tricolor, shouted their thanks to the United States this morning as more staid delegates—civil authorities, generals, admirals, bishops and others—went aboard the freighter Cold Harbor, chartered by the American Red Cross, to take charge of her cargo of milk, vitamins and clothing.

The delegation passed along the dockside through lines of these children, reinforced by Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and Red Cross nurses, all cheering themselves hoarse. At the gangway Capt. Alfred Moore, master of the Cold Harbor, and his officers received the visitors.

Richard Allen, delegate of the American Red Cross, formally presented the ship's cargo to Free France "as a token of American sympathy."

Jean Barraud, representing the prefect, in accepting the gift said:

"Last December Marshal Petain warned: 'It will be a hard winter. French families will suffer from cold and hunger. Vitamins will be scarce.'

"Months have passed and the marshal's fears have been realized. But if France does not flaunt her misery, America nevertheless has understood. Without blatant publicity she has already accomplished a marvelous work and has aided thousands of our families. Times may change but what remains ever unchanged is American generosity. Let me express our gratitude by simply crying, 'Long live America! Long live France!'"

Raid-Scarred Mobile Kitchen From Britain Due Tomorrow

The Iron Duke, mobile tea kitchen bomb-scarred in the Battle of Britain, will visit Washington tomorrow and Sunday.

Thirty-three times under fire, machine-gunned from Messerschmitts and the target of many diving Stukas, the tea kitchen somehow survived and is the first relic of the present "Total War" to tour America.

Its itinerary in Washington tomorrow is as follows:

Coming from Baltimore, it will be met at the District line by a police escort, at approximately 8:30 a. m., and will proceed to the Capitol.

There, at 9 a. m., it will be inspected by Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and other members of Congress.

At 9:30 a. m. Mrs. F. Hugh Treherne-Thomas, veteran officer in the Women's Voluntary Service of England, now hostess of the Iron Duke, will broadcast over WOL.

From the Capitol, the relic will follow a police escort to Clarendon Circle, on Wilson Boulevard, Va., to remain there on exhibition from 10:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m.

Its next destination is the parking lot at Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest, where it will remain until 3:45 p. m.

Then, with police escort, it will be taken to the British War Relief Society headquarters at 1018 Connecticut Avenue, to be on exhibition until 6 p. m. The actor, Maurice Evans, will be a visitor at 5:30 p. m.

It will be kept on the lot at Thirteenth Street and Pennsylvania Avenue overnight.

The Sunday schedule is as follows:

9 a. m. to 11:30 a. m., exhibited at Chevy Chase Circle. Debutantes will serve tea.

10.05 a. m., Mrs. Treherne-Thomas will broadcast over WINX.

At noon the Iron Duke will visit the British Embassy, for inspection by Lord and Lady Halifax.

Between 1:15 p. m. and 2:45 p. m., it will be exhibited at Massachusetts and Wisconsin Avenues.

Between 3 p. m. and 6 p. m., it will be exhibited in front of the residence of Mrs. William Parks, 6325 Sixteenth Street Northwest, where the Daughters of Scotia will sponsor a tea.

From Washington the Iron Duke goes South, with a first stop Monday in Warrenton, Va. The kitchen was in daily service for six months—from June to December, 1940—in England. One of its most renowned services occurred during the intense bombing of London the night of December 29.

In a letter to the President, Truitt told the Chief Executive that "My personal affairs demand immediate consideration and attention."

British Blast Berlin in Huge Air Offensive

strait heard a number of heavy explosions on the French coast.

[The attack was centered about Calais, the Associated Press reported. An airdrome there was heavily hit, it was announced officially, and bombs burst also upon grounded German aircraft.

[In offensive and defensive action since Wednesday night the Germans have lost 17 planes to 6 for the R. A. F., the British declare.]

In addition to ranging over Berlin, Bremen and Hamburg, last night's R. A. F. attackers bombed the Schipol Airfield, in Amsterdam, and another airdrome in Norway, dropped high explosives on a large Nazi supply ship at anchor in Ijmuiden Harbor, in the Netherlands, and on other vessels at Ostend, in Belgium, and set large fires in the Boulogne docks.

The attack centered on the capital and two port cities of Germany itself. British officials said that the raiding forces over each city were heavy. The weather was clear and an almost full moon lit the way to all three targets.

U. S. Aid Spurs British Effort

By the Associated Press

London, March 13—Britain's great developing offensive is made possible by the replacements of war planes expected from the United States.

In an informed quarter it was made plain that, by President Roosevelt's signature of the lease-lend bill, Britain is able at last to launch a really offensive war" in the skies.

"New and more powerful bombers"—their name and make of origin not disclosed by the air ministry—went into action with the heaviest explosives in the British arsenal.

Berlin, the ministry said, was left alight with fires, so tremendous their reflection was visible 100 miles away. So, too, were the main German ports of Hamburg and Bremen.

For both the offense and the defense in the aerial war the British disclosed new plans.

Offensively the American-made Consolidated and four-motored Boeing bombers are prominent in the picture for they are expected to widen the British attacking area and thus force the Nazis to thin out their antiaircraft defenses.

New Defense Weapons

Defensively, new weapons—nature not disclosed—have been given to night fighter planes and a "shotgun" type of barrage, throwing a complete pattern of shell in heavy and coordinated fire, is being operated.

Assured of replacements from the United States, the Air Ministry also is prepared to augment greatly its night fighter patrols.

The R. A. F.'s finest pilots, back from the raid on Berlin, told graphic stories of flying in the face of thunderous ground defenses.

"But it was well worth it," he said. "I am sure our bombs shook the city."

(Sixteen persons were killed and 37 wounded in Berlin, according to German sources.)

The attack began soon after nightfall and continued, in waves, until an hour or so before dawn.

The weather was clear, the moon full, leaving all three German cities—Berlin, Hamburg and Bremen—wide open targets.

"Deadly Precision"

High explosives and incendiaries "were aimed with deadly precision; the bombardiers could pick out streets, railroads and lakes almost as if they were flying in the daytime," air ministry sources said.

The chief objective at Bremen was described as an important plant for the manufacture of war materiel. Bomb bursts were reported seen over the whole area of the factory.

The first bombs fell on Hamburg at 10 p. m., the air ministry said, and the raid there reached its high point at midnight although it was nearly 5 a. m. Thursday before the last British bombers wheeled away.

????—Write your own caption for this

Suppose you be the judge. Here's the setup—

A painting was placed in The Post's display window yesterday, latest in the series of "passerby pictures" lent by the Government's Section of Fine Arts. It depicts a couple of rugged-faced cowboys.

"Now here's the angle," explained Edward (Ned) Bruce, chief of the arts section. "With a good title, or caption, this picture can do more to whip up our patriotism, make us defense conscious, than an ordinary poster.

"We decided to name it 'I'll Call You.' In the poker-playing sense, that is. The idea is that these tough, American hombres are ready to call any bluff the dictators try to work on us. Get it?"

The answer, after looking at the painting, is "no." "I'll Call You" doesn't have any more connection with the subject matter than "Are You There?" or "It's Stopped Raining."

So the public is invited to come by for a look-see, then drop into The Post lobby and tell the man at the counter what he thinks the work should be entitled, keeping Bruce's patriotism motif in mind.

Roger O'Hanlon Leaves Bulk Of $425,000 Estate to Charity

Roger O'Hanlon, retired liquor dealer who died here February 16, left the bulk of his estate of $425,000 to more than a score of educational and religious charities.

Mr. O'Hanlon, whose home was 419 L Street Northwest, came to this country as an immigrant from Ireland.

The American Security and Trust Co. and Attorney Leo A. Walshe were named executors and trustees in Mr. O'Hanlon's will, which was filed for probate in the District Court yesterday.

The executors' petition said the estate included real estate valued at $158,000 and $267,000 in securities. Mr. O'Hanlon directed that the property be held in trust for the lifetime of his sister, Mrs. Kate McCoy, 919 L Street Northwest, to whom he also left his personal belongings and household furnishings. The trustees were directed to pay Mrs. McCoy such of the income as she directed.

Mr. O'Hanlon ordered that the estate be distributed among the legatees after his sister's death. The specific bequests included:

Frank O'Hanlon, nephew, New York, $3,000; Mary O'Hanlon, niece, 919 L Street Northwest, $10,000 outright and $3,000 more in trust for a nephew, Patrick O'Hanlon, New York; Mrs. Annie O'Hanlon, sister-in-law, $500; for division among other nieces and nephews, $10,000.

Also to Mrs. Mary Muckien, sister, County Down, Eire, $10,000; Michael O'Hanlon, brother, $5,000; the Rev. John O'Hanlon, Isle of Wight, England, $2,000; the Rev. John K. Cartwright, Church of the Immaculate Conception, $1,500.

Va. Railroad Discontinuance Move Upheld

The Virginia Corporation Commission yesterday ruled that it would adhere to an earlier decision permitting the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad to discontinue passenger service between here and Purcellville after midnight April 12.

This decision was at least a temporary defeat for Mrs. Nellie O. Fletcher, of Washington and Leesburg, Va., whose fight against cessation of passenger service had resulted in three successive 60-day stays.

Mrs. Fletcher, whose home is 1851 Columbia Road Northwest, last appeared before the commission March 3, asking that it permanently overrule its decision to permit discontinuance of passenger service. She also appealed unsuccessfully to Governor Price of Virginia for help in her fight.

Last nigh. Mrs. Fletcher said she probably would appeal to the courts in an effort to get the decision changed. She said she had the support of "thousands" of persons living along the railroad in her fight. The railroad's successful plea was based on dwindling passenger traffic.

Service Men May Be Lodged At G. W. Gym

Men in uniform visiting the Capital over weekends may be provided lodging at George Washington University and Heurich gymnasiums, it was announced yesterday by Robert E. Bondy, chairman of the welfare and consumer interest committee of the District Defense Council.

Bondy said negotiations are now under way to obtain the use of the gymnasiums which would be furnished with Army cots for the soldiers. Maj. Charles H. Dodd, division manager of the Salvation Army and chairman of the lodging subcommittee of the council, is conducting the negotiations.

Headquarters for the welfare committee, which also includes the group "drafting" Government girls for camp dances, will be in the District Building in the offices used by the inaugural committee.

Hugo Wolter, recreation secretary for the Council of Social Agencies and a member of Bondy's committee, will be in charge of the office. He will be assisted by Miss Sybil Baker, of the playground department, and S. L. Sommer, of the District W. P. A.

Soldiers, sailors, marines and others attached to Uncle Sam's uniformed forces will get to hear and dance to Benny Goodman's music at half price this Sunday at Uline's Arena, according to Ray Everett, chairman of the commercial amusement committee.

In addition to this offer, Everett said the men in uniform will be admitted at half cost at the four remaining home games of the Washington Eagles at Riverside Stadium and will receive a 25 per cent reduction at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace for skating privileges.

There has been such an abundance of actors, musicians, magicians and the like volunteering to visit the camps and entertain that the committee is about to set up a board of critics who will judge on all performers before they are sent out. Minor Hudson, chairman of the hospitality and recreation committee, will handle this phase of the program.

No One Here Saw Moon's Eclipse, But There Was One

The sun partially eclipsed the moon yesterday, but you'll have to take the scientists' word for it.

No one in Washington or vicinity actually saw the eclipse, not even the scientists. They gave assurance, however, that it took place, astronomical calculations being as exact as they are.

Fog and mist prevented the event being visible from this planet. Even if atmospheric conditions had been good, the Naval Observatory pointed out, the partial eclipse could hardly have been seen here anyway, because it occurred at sunrise.

Detective Ends Bride's Slaying Quiz in West

Detective Sergt. Aubrey M. Tolson, homicide squad, is expected to return to Washington tonight from Kansas City where he has been since Tuesday investigating the attack-murder of Mrs. Rose Simons Abramowitz.

Whether the investigator was successful in his search for evidence which may lead to the arrest of the person who strangled the pretty, 30-day bride, was not disclosed in a brief telegram received by Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, yesterday.

Thompson said also he did not know when the dead woman's husband, Barney N. Abramowitz, 33, an attorney with the Social Security Board, would return from Kansas City where his wife's body wrs shipped for burial.

Meantime, detectives here continued checking telephone "tips" most of which concern persons who have been molesting women during the last few months. Nothing tangible has been uncovered so far, Detective Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the homicide squad, said.

Darnall said also he was still holding at the Fourth Precinct Station William Ely, colored, who worked shoveling snow at the apartment house, 1901 Sixteenth Street Northwest, the day Mrs. Abramowitz was slain. The prisoner has denied any knowledge of the crime.

Maj. Buckley Cleared in Cab Driver's Death

Maj. Harold R. Buckley, 44, Army Air Corps, was absolved of blame in the death of Frederick Lacey, 45-year-old cab driver, yesterday, when a coroner's jury decided the latter died of natural causes—a heart attack.

It was revealed before the hearing by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald that fingerprint records at the Veteran's Bureau identified Lacey as Frederick Brown, who deserted the Navy in 1913.

Lacey died following an altercation with Major Buckley Wednesday on the sidewalk outside of a hamburger stand in the 1400 block K Street Northwest. The inquest was held to determine responsibility for the death.

Major Buckley, taking the stand in his own defense, said he entered the eating place about 4 a. m. After drinking a cup of coffee, he said, he stopped to play with a Great Dane dog which was lying by one of the booths.

"The dog was big and I guess I was playing a little roughly with him," the major told the jury, "but the dog didn't seem to mind it."

Lacey, or Brown, took offense and told the Army officer he would "meet him outside."

The cab driver took his coat off, the major declared, and struck him, knocking him down. Maj. Buckley said he got up and tussled with the man and both fell to the sidewalk, Lacey on top.

Several witnesses separated them, he said, and Lacey collapsed. He was dead when a doctor from Emergency Hospital arrived.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy, who performed an autopsy, told the jury that the exertion killed Lacey, but added that any unusual activity might have caused his death.

Property Owners File Suit to Keep Area Restricted

Five property owners of the Columbia Heights section filed suit in the District Court yesterday to enforce a covenant which restricted residence in the area to white persons until 1979.

The plaintiffs said in their complaint that Chandler M. Preston, 2809 Fifteenth Street Northwest, has rented his property at 2326 Thirteenth Street Northwest to Lauren and Martha Fleet, who are colored persons.

The plaintiffs claimed this violated a covenant signed June 29, 1938, which precludes colored persons from living on both sides of Thirteenth Street between Clifton and Euclid Streets Northwest for 20 years.

Attorneys Henry Gilligan and James A. Crooks represented the property owners, who were Rebecca Gorewitz, 2528 Thirteenth Street Northwest; Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Bogikes, 2534 Thirteenth Street Northwest; James R. Hunter, 2516 Thirteenth Street Northwest, and Neva H. Hill, 2518 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

British Cruiser Sunk, London Says

London, March 13 (INS).—The British admiralty tonight reported the auxiliary cruiser Manistee was sunk by enemy action, but gave no details as to how the converted merchant vessel met her end, or anything about casualties.

The Manistee was a 5,380-ton vessel built in 1920 at Birkenhead, according to Lloyd's Register. She was equipped as a refrigerator ship and converted for naval use after the outbreak of war.

Capital Looks to Its Keyholes, But Not to Spy on Neighbors

Washington residents are key conscious these days—and with reason.

Last Saturday a pretty redhaired bride was murdered in her Sixteenth Street apartment, and while police are of the opinion that Mrs. Rose Abramowitz, 23, admitted her own slayer, there remains the chance that the killer might have admitted himself with a key.

A search of records at police headquarters yesterday disclosed that while the percentage of crimes committed by persons with duplicate apartment keys is not high, the number is sufficiently large to cause tenants concern and to give owners and managers reason to exercise the greatest care in the handling of keys.

The Post yesterday canvassed tenants and managers in ten representative apartment houses and discovered a variety of precautionary practices intended to keep keys from falling into the hands of criminals.

In smaller buildings there are no master or pass keys and tenants are responsible for the safekeeping of keys to their own apartments. In larger buildings, master keys are kept by resident managers who are frequently under bond.

In one of the newer apartments, the manager keeps the master key locked up and either he, the assistant manager or the room clerk on duty is required to be present when the key is used either to admit a tenant who has locked himself out or some other person who might have business entering the apartment.

In this building, special care is taken to see that the master key is handled by no one save a responsible apartment employe to guard against the possibility of a wax impression being made of it. There have been instances, though not in recent years, where criminals, posing as repairmen, have been able to set themselves up to wholesale burglar raids by duplicating apartment master keys after first making wax impressions of them.

Usually, apartment tenants are furnished two keys. Generally, locks are changed when the keys are lost. Frequently, the change is made without charge to the tenant.

In several apartment houses, each tenant is provided with only one key. Duplicates are kept in theft-proof cases, accessible only to the manager or his assistant. In some apartments, the halls are patrolled regularly and all but the front or main entrances locked before midnight.

In the apartments canvassed, no instance was found of theft or other crimes committed by persons having duplicate keys. Over periods of several years, tenants and managers reported, thefts occurred when apartment doors were left unlocked or when the thief was able to pry the door open.

In two of the buildings covered, older doors have been replaced with steel ones equipped with double locks.

In the first two months of 1941, 112 apartments were entered by thieves whose profits were for the most part small. In 13—about 12 per cent—of the cases, police recorded the entry as by duplicate key.

Capt. Lawrence R. Beall, head of the police records division, estimated, however, that probably not more than half of the 15 actually were duplicate key cases. He stated that it is customary for police investigators to report housebreakings as duplicate key cases whenever no evidence of entry by other means was found.

Apartment house burglaries represented approximately 25 per cent of the total for the two months. Police reported 444 burglaries of all kinds for the period.

Lofoten Raiders Chided Hitler, Dispatch Reveals

Stockholm, March 13 (AP).—The Norwegian Telegram Bureau said today the Norwegian and British naval forces which raided the Lofoten Islands off the Norway coast on March 4 wirelessed Adolf Hitler from the islands that they were "very disappointed at the poor reception we have had here from the German forces."

"All of us had hoped you would keep your promises that wherever Allied forces landed on the continent of Europe they would be met by strong German forces eager to throw them out again."

MERCHANDISING SUPERIORITY?
No amount of special handling and merchandising improves the quality originally bred and fed into beef. The U. S. "CHOICE" Grade is only beef produced from livestock showing a relatively high degree of breeding and feeding.

GOVERNMENTAL INSPECTION?
The U. S. Government title tends to indicate that its mandatory Interstate Government Meat Inspection bespeaks of beef quality—when it is the optional U. S. Government Grading Mark that ALONE attests to the quality.

QUESTIONABLE AVAILABILITY?
Not here and there as suits the fancy of the neighborhood purse, but at every one of the four GIANT Stores—the ONE and ONLY grade of beef sold is U. S. "CHOICE"—the highest grade of beef regularly sold at retail!

Schenck's Pals Tell How They Played While He Was Away

By the Associated Press

New York, March 13.—Al Wertheimer, a Hollywood gambler, testified in Federal Court today that in 1935 he took over the Los Angeles mansion of Film Executive Joseph M. Schenck, knocked down a couple of walls, put in a roulette wheel and created a gambling house—all without Schenck's knowledge.

Asked what Schenck's reaction was when he discovered the situation, Wertheimer, a witness in the income tax evasion trial of the film magnate, replied:

"He gave me the devil about it a few months later. He telephoned me and bawled me out after the district attorney and police had raided the place."

Pressed for further information concerning Schenck's reaction, the witness added:

"Well, he telephoned me and said it was a shame that we used his fine place for gambling purposes."

The arrangements for the use of the house, Wertheimer said, were made by him, his brother Lou, a friend of Schenck named Lou Anger and the mansion's caretaker. Schenck was away at the time.

Wertheimer said he later paid Anger $2,000 for the damage done to the mansion, but he did not know whether Schenck ever received it.

Schenck pointed out that during the time his house was used for gambling, from May through August, 1935, he was in Europe.

Al Wertheimer testified he and his brother, in 1935, operated the Clover Club, in Hollywood, which he described as a gambling place mainly for motion picture stars and executives.

He said Schenck played there occasionally but he did not know whether Schenck won or lost.

"We had a limit of $25 to a number on the wheels, $200 a throw for dice but no limit on chemin-de-fer," he said.

Fisher Quits REA; Charges 'Whitewash'

Protesting what he called a "whitewash" of the Rural Electrification Administration by Agriculture Secretary Wickard, Boyd Fisher, assistant to the REA administrator, informed The Post last night that he had mailed in his letter of resignation.

The 54-year-old REA official asserted that Wickard, in a talk yesterday to REA employes, had not taken sufficient account of evidence submitted to him during a departmental probe of irregularities in REA.

Agriculture Department officials, questioned last night about Wickard's talk, said he had not touched on the investigation of REA and had spoken merely in general terms about the agency's role in the farm program.

Refuses to Amplify

Fisher refused to amplify his charge of irregularities in REA, other than to say there had been "some wrongdoing" in connection with contract awards and purchases of materials in field offices.

A more detailed statement, Fisher said, would have to wait until he consults with a lawyer.

Fisher said that his resignation had been requested several times during the last few months. Agriculture Department spokesmen confirmed this statement. Fisher said further that since his superiors did not insist, he had declined to tender his resignation until last night.

His letter of resignation was prompted yesterday, he said, by the 15-minute address the Secretary of Agriculture made to REA employes.

Fisher said that the Secretary had "by his manner" indicated his approval of "activities" in REA's engineering department, and charged that the results of an investigation had been "negative."

Routine Inquiry

Spokesmen for the department said that REA was the subject of a "routine" investigation in connection with the agency's incorporation in the Agriculture Department by a White House reorganization order. Some "personnel irregularities" were being looked into, they said. "Investigations are going on all the time," they added.

Fisher said that he joined REA the first month of its existence, in 1935, and had been there ever since. Previously, he served a short appointment with the Rural Resettlement Administration, he stated.

Fisher said he had come to Washington from Ohio, where he said he was in charge of personnel for the State relief setup under WPA. Previously, he continued, he had specialized in factory management. Fisher told The Post that during the World War he had been in charge of training personnel experts for the Government.

Wife Who Slew 3d Mate Freed In 4th's Death

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. LUE BURNS, of East St. Louis, Ill., shown testifying, was acquitted last night by a jury of a charge of murdering her fourth husband. She said she shot him in self-defense at their home last January 23

By International News Service

East St. Louis, Ill., March 13.—Mrs. Lue Rodemich Clay Burns, 38, who was absolved of blame in the killing of her third husband a few years ago, tonight was freed of charges of murdering her fourth husband.

Both times Mrs. Burns won freedom by pleading self defense.

Both husbands, Shelby Clay and John P. Burns, were shot to death.

Her first husband died of an abscess and her second husband was drowned.

Mrs. Burns was freed by a jury of six men and six women who deliberated three and a half hours. She greeted the verdict with a broad smile and the statement that "justice always wins."

Burns, a jeweler, was killed in the yard of his home last January 23.

She pleaded self defense, the same plea she made before a coroner's jury at an inquest into the slaying of her third husband.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

WARDMAN'S NEW "BURGUNDY ROOM" will open just a week from today on March 21. Tommy Marvin's orchestra will move from the Metronome Room to the much larger Burgundy Room on Fridays and Saturdays. We had a pre-peek at the new spot and it's beautiful even in its unfinished condition. Glistening wine tones and silver dominate the color scheme and there's a huge white leather door that folds like an accordion . . . Guili-Guili (it's pronounced Geely-Geely) is successfully magicking many notable Metronome ringsiders. Mr. and Mrs. Fred (N. B. C.) Shawn and Mrs. George E. Allen's party were so mystified by quantities of vanishing chickens and eggs that they decided Guili-Guili carried an incubator under his flowing robes.

Carmen Cavallaro's orchestra in the Cosmos Room is going to "give" in a new way,—to the Army. Trumpeter Joe Dale, violinist Bernie Martin and drummer Murph Heller have all been given the come-hither sign by their local boards.

SHOREHAM VIGNETTES. The glittering glass costume worn by dancer Alberta Mansfield is painted on her before each act. We don't know how she gets it off, maybe with nail polish remover . . . Jose and Paquita are the most handsomely costumed Pan-American steppers who've come to our town. Paquita is done up in a bouffancy of palest pink and white with a big circle of white lace framing her face. Jose wears a white vaquero costume with serape in brilliant colors . . . The Music Hall Boys are singing "Sunshine of Paradise Alley" and will be held over for another week which makes their umpty-steenth.

THE UNIQUE CYMBALON played by gypsy Loczi in the new Plymouth looks like a triple-midget, open-faced baby grand piano. Loczi makes beautiful music by tapping the cymbalon's exposed wires with padded mallets . . . The Plymouth is open every night in the week, including Sunday, with music by the Bob Straszny group from 9 to 1.

RIVIERA LOUNGEING. The Annapolis track team broke training in a big and constructive way in the Lounge Riviera the other eve with 31 cadets and their dates enjoying a filet mignon dinner. . . . New instruments are adding vivid color to Riviera dance music. Maestro Pete Macias is inflated with pleasure over the tonal richness of his new Baldwin piano and Jerry Rhodes has a new electric string bass, the only one in Washington.

Father Neptune will change his name to St. Patrick next Monday. Stars of the St. Patrick's party in the Neptune Room will be Bob and Bertie Hellman who claim the largest repertoire of Irish songs and music possessed by any piano duo. They learned most of them in Shanghai where they owned two night clubs and audiences had a nostalgic "yen" for Irish tunes.

HI HAT DOINGS. Manager Russell A. Conn of the Ambassador Hotel celebrating his birthday with Mrs. Conn and their friend "Chick" Miller, railroad exec. There was a gorgeous birthday cake but one of those singing "Happy Birthday" greetings was just a big laugh because the messenger boy had laryngitis. . . . Jimmy Summerville is swinging a real 200-year-old Irish shillelah when he sings "Same Old Shillelah."

NON-SPLASHING BEER. "Chuck" O'Donnell, expert mixer of the Ancho Room, has invented a device guaranteed, to put an end to the business of beer boiling out like a Johnstown flood from a newly opened can. It's been patented, will probably be in production in a few months.

THE OSTRICH AND THE PEACOCK UNITE to form a glowing picture in the Casino Royal's new "Anniversary Revue." Gorgeous peacocks inspired Renee Villon's costume in her "Peacock Dance" which is blended in gracefully with the spectacular fan dance of the Hollywood Starlets. Brightly enjoyable, too, is the balance of the show including the lasso tap dance of Vincent and Anita, Val Eddy's xylophoning, "Jivin' Jack" Schafer remains in a riot inciting class of his own.

"All or Nothing At All" will be a top tune in a few weeks, vows Maestro Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room, who has a practically unflecked record of picking hits before they're hits.

VETS OF WORLD WAR I turned out in force for opening of Paul Young's new show, were given honor positions at the ringside, had an oversize good time . . . And no wonder. For Paul Young's revue is distinctly "big time." Manu and Malia, real South Seas lasses, dance in sarongs. DeLloyd McKaye belongs in any gallery of the country's leading pianists. Emcee Pete Randall, fresh from Ben Marden's Riviera, uses an ingratiating "smoothie" technique. Blonde Linda Lief and dark-eyed Louise Lee turn in perfect scores in their respective stepping and singing chores.

LOUD BUT LOVELY is the new yellow evening gown worn by Bonnie Boyd in the Mayflower Lounge. It nearly drowns out Dick Koons' band and Bonnie herself recommends smoked glasses for onlookers. Its top is of yellow jersey with huge sleeves and the skirt is a balloon of plaid taffeta. Bonnie has a theme song to go with the dress. It's "Oh, Look at Me Now."

QUICKIES. Ramon, leader of Madrillon's Trio Lirico, looks like a Latin version of cinema star Robert Young . . . You'd be surprised at the picture in that locket worn by Evie Knight of the King Cole Room . . . Troika's Rosita Rios won first prize in a popularity contest for Pan-American entertainers conducted by la Prensa, New York's leading Spanish newspaper . . . Patsy La Marr, of the Lotus, wears a uniform that would make Goering green with envy. It's of red and grey satin with bright blue braiding . . . A number of Russian ballet dancers recently visited the Pall Mall Room. But they had trouble doing the boompsa-daisy.

Only musical bartenders in town are those at Restaurant 823. They clink silver smartly on bottles and glasses to accompany the Heintze Brothers and Jane Marlow. And when they take a notion to stamp their feet in rhythm, it sounds as though a couple of barrels had been dropped.

MUSICAL BLITZ. Those moments when Mayfair's Paul Kain and Sammy Ferro team up with clarinet and muted trombone. They're super-dooper . . . The musical acrobatics that Tommy Johnson performs on his little white piano at the Silver Fox. No wonder the spot is becoming headquarters for young Chevy Chasers . . . "Princess Peipuli," the diverting Hawaiian comedy number that's exclusive with Don Carper's Four in Cafe Caprice . . . The piano trickery of "Nola" as done by Vic Nini in Ciro's Famous Village. Reminds you of Vincent Lopez.

KAVAKOS KUT-UPPING. Green song sheets are distributed to Kavakos Grill customers every night. And they have huge fun singing "Bubbles," "Irish Eyes," "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," and other fine old dependables . . . Remember, there are fine floor shows at Kavakos' twice an evening over the weekend.

Paranoia Is Paramount In New Film at Capitol

Robert Montgomery Is Hit in 'Rage in Heaven,' Aided by Ingrid Bergman and George Sanders; Al Trahan Walks Off With the Stage Bill

"RAGE IN HEAVEN." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the novel by James Hilton, adapted to the screen by Christopher Isherwood and Robert Thoeren, starring Robert Montgomery, Ingrid Bergman, with George Sanders, Lucille Watson, Oscar Homolka, Philip Merivale, Aubrey Mather, Matthew Boulton, Frederic Worlock, Francis Compton, Gilbert Emery and Ludwig Hart. Directed by Woody S. Van Dyke. At Loew's Capitol.

IT IS A PSYCHIATRIST'S DRAMA that is being presented on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater this week. But it is a psychological study so deftly turned in the direction of interesting and suspenseful entertainment that its clinical aspects become purely secondary to the infallible dramatic situation that requires the last-minute rescue of an innocent man from the gallows.

BELL

In "Rage in Heaven," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adroit picturization of the novel by James Hilton, the pivotal character is a paranoiac. The first and foremost symptom of paranoia is that harrowing mental state usually described as a "delusion of persecution;" its second is a thinly veiled aspiration to admiration, adulation and awe. These are the unfortunate qualities of nature that dominate the life of Philip Mondell, the principal figure in Mr. Hilton's penetrating probings of mental aberration.

In the early scenes of the picture, the youthful Mr. Mondell escapes from a Paris institution for the cure of mental ailments. Proceeding to his ancestral English home, he takes over the enormous responsibilities of conducting the business of his family's steel industry, marries his ailing mother's secretary and companion and sets up his best friend as the source of all his troubles and the object of his most diabolic schemes of vengeful retribution. He builds up a pretty case. By the insanely shrewd contrivings of a perverted mind, he manages to make his own suicide appear to be the result of a minutely planned murder. The trial of his wholly innocent friend and the manner of his reprieve from the penalties of the law form the crux of the picture. It is an examination of abnormal mind and twisted thinking that by some strange alchemy is stark and sympathetic, stolid and sentimental, admirable and abhorrent.

Having demonstrated a fine capacity for lending human warmth and believable frailty to a similar character in "Night Must Fall," Robert Monigomery goes a step farther in "Rage in Heaven." He offers a portrayal of the hopelessly afflicted protagonist of Mr. Hilton's deeply moving observations of a warped mind that is so subtly sinister, so delicately defined and so definitely demented as to make this one of his most impressive achievements in front of the cameras. We happen to know that Mr. Montgomery is a brilliant, brittle and particularly well-balanced young man. In "Rage in Heaven" he is the complete paranoiac. In the role of his tortured bride, Ingrid Bergman presents one of her most gracious impersonations, as a young woman in love, not once but twice. As the "other man" in the case, George Sanders, relieved for once of his habitual villainy, demonstrates futher claim to eminence as one of the cinema's most competent and versatile actors. His role of "hero" becomes him handsomely. And here, for the first time on the screen, Oscar Homolka is permitted to display something approximating the full scope of his ability as an extraordinarily effective character actor. Lucille Watson leads the supporting cast, with Philip Merivale, Gilbert Emery, Frederic Worlock and others of note performing functions that fall something beneath the full measure of their capabilities.

The stage bill at the Capitol this week would be a star-spangled hit in the view of this half-witted department if it had nobody else on it but Al Trahan. The tremendous Mr. Trahan is that devastating desecrator of superb talents who would rather be a clown than a one-man constellation of the arts. He has an incomparable barytone voice and an artist's command of the piano's keyboard. His curse is that he also has a magnificent sense of lowbrow humor. He puts the accent on the last. His present act follows the general outline of the one he has presented here so many times before, with certain definite improvements. One of these definite improvements is the acquisition of a new partner, Geri Dorsey, a statuesque blonde with a superlative soprano voice and an obviously lively talent at the piano on her own account. Together they are what is familiarly referred to as a "riot" of melody, mirth and madness.

Next to them comes Rose Marie, the perennial songstress, who also scores a show-stopping hit with a catchy catalogue of songs, song-stories and impersonations. Ray McDonald takes his place up there near the top, too, with his ne plus ultra tap dancing. The Rhythm Rockets account for most of the rest of it.

The caperish Mr. Kaufman's Gershwin overture, with vocal interludes by Lynn Allison and George Mayer; Art Brown's organic songfest, the Fox Movietone News and a few minor screen items complete an entertainment that might cause you to look to your own mental state.

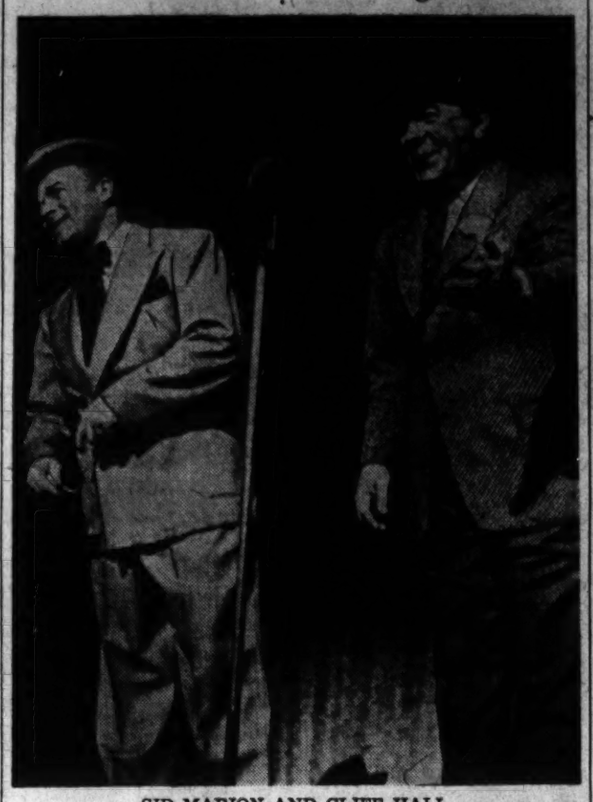
Stars of Condensed Stage Hit



SID MARION AND CLIFF HALL

who return to Washington today to star in "The Streets of Paris" on the stage of the Earle Theater. They were the chief comedians of the colorful piece when it played the National a season or two ago and are two very funny fellows. They are surrounded by an ace cast, including that baffling bartender, "Think-a-Drink" Hoffman

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 13.

For the first time in ages I saw a piano used for mood music on a set yesterday. Director Gregory La Cava, directing "Unfinished Business" was ripping out some Stephen Foster while discussing the next scene with Irene Dunne and Bob Montgomery. Instead of working from a completed script, Greg writes the dialog as he goes, frequently working on a dark sound stage until 3 in the morning. Ten minutes before the scene goes on, the actors don't know what they're going to say. But the dialog is so natural actors "get it" the first time they read it.

HOPPER

Producer Hal Wallis tells me he may get Monty Woolley for his original part in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" instead of Charles Laughton or Cary Grant, who's longing to do it. Hal thinks the play's good enough to stand on its own feet without a star, and if he casts Woolley, he'll have one after the picture's released. Smart thinking, Hal.

"Ma" Perkins had better stick to her job of bossing men and leave women's hats alone. It seems a simple matter for her to take on a great hulking 6-feet-4 of indecision. But when she starts on a 4-foot feminine bombshell, she's letting herself in for something she doesn't bargain for. How far do you suppose some of us would have gotten if it hadn't been for hats? On the other hand, you might say, "Look at hers"—and then wonder.

Joan Crawford's heart remains in New York, even though she's still making "A Woman's Face" at Metro. That's the reason no one has seen here in a night club. She's getting her pleasure these nights by remote control—over the long distance telephone.

It looks as though that romance of Director Charles Vidor and little Evelyn Keyes was developing into something important.

Kyle Crichton, Collier's Casanova, isn't concentrating only on the movies during his visit here. He went as far afield as Ontario to get an interview with a baseball player.

Well, Jack Oakie's certainly had the tops in touches. He signed for a registered package containing a phonograph record, and when he played it, the record turned out to be a request for a hundred dollars from a man Jack hadn't seen for 15 years. "I've just got to have the century spot," ended the record.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 13.

POLITICS: The President always has loved a good, old-fashioned ward fight. He enters into it with as much enthusiasm as he shows in matters of international interest. And so when the Democrats designated Dean Alfange to run against Joe Baldwin and Eugene Connolly for the Congressional seat vacated by the death of Kenneth Simpson—an election which was won by Baldwin—Roosevelt summoned Alfange to the White House . . . "I know that District very well," said the President, referring to the Silk Stocking District. He thereupon advised the candidate on what measures to take to offset the usual Republican majority there. "In the Fifteenth Assembly District," said the President, then involved in the lend-lease bill fight, "try to get the elevator men on your side. The Park Avenue people will be against you, but the elevator men, even if they don't live in the district, can influence the chambermaids and servants—whose votes count just the same."

LYONS

DEFINITION: At a party in Washington last week some of the guests discussed the retention of the status quo, both here and in the Far East . . . "What do you mean by status quo" one of them asked . . . "'Status quo,'" said William S. Knudsen, "is Latin for 'the fix we're in.'"

CONFLICT: Harry Adler, the harmonica player, was a guest at the British Embassy, where he played for Lord Halifax and his friends. The next afternoon Adler lunched with Sir Henry Selfe, of the British Purchasing Commission . . . "My best harmonicas are now in Germany," Adler confided. "Can you tell me some way of getting them over here?" . . . "I don't know," Selfe told him, "but if you do find a way, let me know—so that I can have our lads put a stop to it."

CHANGE: Hazel Scott of Cafe Society Uptown was a prize student of the Juilliard School. There she studied the piano with Dr. Noble . . . Saturday night her former teacher came to the night club, heard her play and was delighted with her accomplishments . . . "From now on," said Dr. Noble, "I'm going to tell all my friends to come here, instead of going to Carnegie Hall" . . . "Except on April 23," Miss Scott told him. "That's when I play at Carnegie."

ERROR: Tuesday night, at the St. James Theater, Orson Welles had a lighting rehearsal for his production of "The Native Son." In the opening scene Welles discovered that the ceiling of the room onstage was made of canvas, which seemed to shiver when anyone walked underneath it. "I want that changed," Welles ordered. "I don't want canvas" . . . "But it isn't canvas," his aide assured . . . Orson walked onstage and proved that he was correct. "All right, I apologize," said his aide. "Let me be the first to admit you're right" . . . "Oh, no," Welles replied. "I'm always the first to admit I'm right."

GRATITUDE: When Elmer Rice presented his Pulitzer Prize winner, "Street Scene," he was approached by one of the stagehands in the theater, who was interested in the social aspects of the play . . . One of the principal roles in "Street Scene" was that of a stagehand who becomes a seducer and a murderer . . . "This is a wonderful play, Mr. Rice," said the stagehand, after witnessing a rehearsal. "For the first time, you've put one of us on the real stage—and made us look human."

COMPARISON: Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., took his New York State bar examination last week. After it was over, the young man who had sat next to Franklin decided that this was an opportunity which might never come to him again—an opportunity to learn just what's happening. "Please tell me," he asked, "what about the international situation?" . . . "It's just as tough," Roosevelt told him, "as the exam we've just had."

FAME: Two autograph hunters waited at the backstage door of "Flight to the West," for Betty Field to appear. The porter there told the two girls to be patient, because the young star always rested before leaving the theater . . . But the girls seemed restless, and held a consultation. Then one of them asked the porter: "Do you ever see Miss Field?" . . . "Yes, every night," he informed . . . "Do you know her? Does she talk with you?" the fan continued . . . "Yes," said the porter . . . The impatient girls conferred again—and then extended pen and paper to the porter. "In that case," they told him, "here—give us your autograph."

RKO-Keith's

Fifteenth Street's Robert Montgomery is quite another chap from the mentally-diseased character who settled down yesterday on F Street. At RKO-Keith's the always beguiling fellow shares with Carole Lombard the title roles of "Mr. and Mrs. Smith," a comedy of matrimony far different from the new melodrama titled "Rage in Heaven," which opened yesterday on F Street.

This is a third week for "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" in our midst, a respectable proof that daft comedy still exerts its power on the ticket buyers. Alfred Hitchcock directed this Hollywood farce, the English director's first attempt to amuse without mystifying. This time the master of involved story telling has tossed out espionage and crime to base his case on a cockeyed legal situation. "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" think they have been married for three years when along comes a minion of the law to tell them it isn't so. It's up to Mr. to make her Mrs. again. Montgomery's handicap becomes a dark-haired Gene Raymond. You go on from there.

Also continuing at Keith's is the latest "March of Time" release, "Uncle Sam, the Non-Belligerent."

Little

With its searchlight apparently piercing an endless future, "Night Train" continues for a fifth week at the Little.

The last word about this rare melodrama has long ago been written. It has already been called the year's finest mystery yarn, one of the season's most bewitching films and altogether a must for the puzzle fanciers. "Night Train's" plot concerns a reluctant Czech scientist, his resourceful daughter, a suave member of the British secret service and an equally crafty chap from the Nazi Gestapo. Their efforts in Berlin, London, Brightbourne, Munich and points along the way are exciting to put it mildly.

Rex Harrison and Margaret Lockwood are the central players, with Paul von Hernreid as a well-mannered menace and those two cricket chaps from "The Lady Vanishes" in the other pivotal roles. It's an adventure you won't want to miss.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 13 (INS).—Nobody knew that Wallace Beery was being a Romeo until his case came up in court and he admitted that he would probably marry Mrs. Loreen Robinson, wealthy widow. Wally carried the torch for his former wife, Mrs. Rita Fort, for so long no one suspected he was courting another woman until the story was made public. Out at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer today they told me that "Jackass Mail," a new story by C. Gardner Sullivan, had just been bought for Wally and Marjorie Main.

PARSONS

I heard from a most reliable source that Al Jolson's hit play "Hold Onto Your Hat," goes to Mayfair productions with a Universal release. A package deal has been made in which Eddie Cantor plays the Jolson role, Martha Raye the character she created on the stage, with Abbott and Costello doing their special comedy routine.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Ida Lupino is suffering from anemia and will be off "Gentle People" until next Tuesday; Frances Meighan, widow of our beloved Tommy, is introducing Arthur W. Drummet, local banker, to her friends; Carmel Myers and Ralph Blum gave a cocktail party for Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Randolph, who are visiting in Los Angeles for a few days. Mr. Randolph has just been in Mexico and was most interesting in his account; Annabella, whose hair is growing longer each time I see her, stopped in—also Lee Marshall. Both Bart and Tyrone Power were working so their wives came without them; Michele Morgan, Raquel Torres and others stopped in.

That was Alene Brandies at the Wilshire Bowl with Edgar Bergen; Gene Weiner, Lillian Roth's pugilistic husband, with a pretty nurse at Victors in Beverly Hills. He says all his troubles have made him ill and the nurse is taking care of him; Gene Lockhart putting on a revue at the Hawthorne Theater to raise money for mobile kitchens; Mary Hay Barthelmess and Pat Nerney, socialite, a very cute little pair at the Mocambo.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Jane Cowl, Most Famous of Juliets, Admits Her Liking for Sausage and Scrambled Eggs

Great Lady of Stage Is Currently Starred In Broadway Play

(One of the busiest women in the American theater is Jane Cowl, and in the following personality-profile Vesta Kelling tells you many interesting facts about her.)

By Vesta Kelling
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, March 13.—Juliet . . . she who was mad about Romeo . . . likes sausages and scrambled eggs after a day's work and she has a dog named Liebchen who sleeps on her bed.

Even as you and I, then, is Jane Cowl, the most famous Juliet of her era, with whom I had supper the other midnight after the performance on her current Manhattan hit, "Old Acquaintance."

Even as you and I . . . except far, far more beautiful.

This great lady of the stage, who played in "Romeo and Juliet" for 356 nights and matinees . . . the longest consecutive run Shakespeare ever enjoyed on Broadway . . . is a truly beautiful woman. Just plain beautiful. . . . None of this charm column business about creating the illusion of it.

But enough of this talk of looks. The lady also has brains.

She's an actress who writes—has authored or coauthored nine plays, seven of which have been produced, including "Lilac Time," "Smilin' Thru," "Daybreak" and "Information Please."

At the moment Miss Cowl is doing a book on her experiences in the theater and theories of acting, to be titled "Here's My Contract."

"The contract I refer to," she explains, "is with the audience, not the management."

Lecturer and Author

Recently she traveled from Seattle to Texas on a three weeks' lecture tour. She is also the author of many magazine articles. Once she attended Columbia University.

"If you have any spare time, what do you do with it?" I asked.

"I go home after the show, retire and read and read and read. I never go to night clubs, rarely to parties and to the theater much less than I wish because I am usually on the stage at curtain time myself."

Liebchen, a dachshund over whose charm and tact Miss Cowl rhapsodizes, and her secretary live with Miss Cowl in a Manhattan Hotel suite. She has no Long Island or Connecticut country place. She is definitely not the outdoor type.

"I read no fiction at all," Miss Cowl says. "Politics, biography and economics are what I enjoy most.

"Not long ago I talked for more than an hour with President Roosevelt on world affairs. I was in Washington for a command performance of my play during his birthday ball celebration and sat at his right at dinner."

Miss Cowl told the President that she has been calling the turns in Europe with accuracy during the past year and that she thought she knew what was going to happen next.

"The President looked astonished," Miss Cowl went on, "and said, 'Do you! I wish you'd tell me!'"

The rest of that conversation is off the record, Miss Cowl says.

Sold Story, Wed Editor

No silver spoon helped Jane Cowl savour her first taste of life. To earn money she wrote at 16 a story about David Warfield, took it to a feature editor on the New York Times, sold the story; married the editor.

He was the late Adolph Klauber, for many years drama critic of the Times, nad Miss Cowl's one and only husband. She has no children; few intimate friends.

Although Miss Cowl chose a path illumined with footlights and has never strayed from it, she has not coasted along the way. She's worked hard to become a great lady of the stage. She made her debut in 1903 in "Sweet Kitty Belaire" and that was the only time she has not carried a leading role.

Four Post Bail In Lottery Raid

Four men, including Clarence (Cocky) Ware, 36, alleged Warring gang member, were at liberty under bail totaling $6,000 last night following arraignment before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage on lottery charges.

The men were seized Wednesday in a raid at 2310½ L Street Northwest. All were accused of operating a lottery and possessing lottery slips.

All were booked at the Third Precinct. Besides Ware, they gave their names as Augusta Christ Dematis, 28, 523 Ingraham Street Northwest; Bernard Clarke, 43, 1291 Twenty-first Street Northwest, and George H. Frazier, colored, 38, of the L Street address.

All pleaded not guilty, and the case was continued for hearing March 26. Each man was required to post $1,500 bail.

DOCTORS stress remaining in bed until the body temperature is normal: Sound advice.

You know how weak you feel after a cold. Colds play havoc in weakening the body. The story is well told in the blood picture. It is important to build back body strength right away to carry the load of work, worries, and loss of sleep. A weakened body may be more susceptible to relapse or long drawn out recovery.

So reason sensibly and take the choice of millions by immediately starting on a course of S.S.S. Tonic—taken three times a day immediately before meals. In the absence of a focal infection or organic disease, you should note improvement in the way you feel and look within the first 10 days. The confidence of millions over many years is the best testimonial of this product.

An experience with S.S.S Tonic will cause you to say to your friends, S.S.S. made me feel and look like myself again."

MODEL OF THE TERMINAL BUILDING OF THE NATION'S GREAT AIRPORT SCHEDULED TO BEGIN OPERATIONS NEXT MONTH

Former U. of Md. Quarterback To Call Signals at New Airport

AIRPORT MANAGER GROVES stood in yesterday's flurry of snow, his eyes sweeping over the expanse of landing field, visualized the huge terminal as soon it will be

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

The Washington National Airport, $12,500,000-dream terminal that has been taking shape at Gravelly Point since November, 1938, soon will emerge from its mud to become a reality.

John Groves, who was appointed manager of the airport the other day, already has moved onto the 729-acre field just across the Potomac. He is using offices vacated by the Bureau of Public Roads. A week from Monday he will move into permanent quarters in the terminal building, that world-of-tomorrow structure that will be the airport's heart.

Actual operations are scheduled to begin about April 15, when Eastern Airlines, Pennsylvania-Central and American Airlines move over from the relatively tiny Washington-Hoover field. However, the dining room, coffee shop, soda fountain and other concessions won't be ready until few weeks later.

From the window of Manager Groves' office yesterday, the "world's finest airport" still had a protoplasmic look about it. Steam shovels and graders were busy smoothing away lumps and filling up watery holes.

Groves, however, preferred to see the airport as it will be, its huge terminal set in a landscaped park, a cafe and dining terrace for 600 patrons, parking facilities for 5,000 cars and planes taking off for all parts of the world.

"I think we're going to have over here," Groves said, "the model airport of the world, both from the viewpoint of the air traveler and the person interested in the recreational facilities it is going to offer."

Long before the dredges began to scoop up mud and gravel for the National Airport, Europeans had formed the habit of flocking to their great air parks for recreation. Tempelhof Field in Berlin, with its de luxe restaurant for 2,500, made more money from visitors than from air traffic. So did the Schiphal Airport in Amsterdam.

Men who planned the airport at Gravelly Point went on the assumption that it, too, would be a magnet for visitors. Hence parking facilities and the "bleachers" on the terminal building where people can see planes come and go. Hence also Manager Groves' habit of thinking in terms of the spectator as well as the passenger.

Johnny Groves, to hear his friends talk, is quite a fellow. His appointment was popular among the officials and employes of the Civilian Aeronautics Authority, and among a lot of people outside the CAA. For one thing he is a career man in the Government. For another, he obtained ideal training for the job serving the Government since he joined the old Bureau of Aeronautics in 1926. It also might be mentioned he was a star athlete at Western High School and the University of Maryland, and has the stamina which will be demanded.

Groves takes over the $6,500-a-year job at the age of 40. He came here in 1914 when his father, Charles S. Groves, was appointed Washington correspondent of the Boston Globe, a post he still holds. Young Groves knew two places before coming here—Hingham, Mass., his birthplace, and Medicine Hat, Alberta, the frigid Canadian town to which his parents moved when he was 10.

JOHNNY GROVES
Looks Over Plans of Nearly Completed Terminal Building

In between Western High School and the University of Maryland, Johnny sought adventure in Texas. He worked as a laborer at the Burkburnett oil field, which brought forth the first gusher in those fabulous environs. After a tornado wrecked the machinery and blew away his job, he worked as a harvest hand in the Panhandle. In 1920 he came back and enrolled at College Park.

He dropped from 160 pounds to 125 pounds working in Texas. At College Park, however, he got up to 170, and as quarterback of the University of Maryland eleven won honorable mention in Walter Camp's last All-American team. To look at him now, you would say that he must have broken his nose in some fierce gridiron tussle. He assures you his nose just "naturally looks that way."

He served as a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps for two and a half years. In that time he married Miss Edith Wilson, of Nashville, Tenn. They now have two children—Judith, 11, and Robert, 8, and live at Fairfax, Va.

When the Commerce Department set up its Bureau of Aeronautics in 1926, Groves was one of the first hired. Over the years he was assigned to virtually every phase of aviation. He prepared charts for use of airmen and traveled the country helping cities and towns lay out their airports. He also learned to fly. Many changes took place in the meantime, including formation of the Civil Aeronautics Authority in 1938. His last job was assistant director of civilian pilot training, a program that has fed 4,813 embryo flyers to the Army and Navy.

Groves takes hold of an airport that is expected to make money from the beginning. For the fiscal year of 1942 Congress has been asked to appropriate $360,000 to operate the field. The income from the airlines and concessions is expected to total $390,000.

To Larry Williams, of the Washington Board of Trade, and others who fought for a model airport in Washington, it will be a matter of regret that Wiley Post won't be able to see the opening at Gravelly Point.

When the lamented airman, returning from his round-the-world flight, came to Washington, he was asked what he thought of the existing airport.

"I saw better in Siberia," he said.

Mrs. Randall, 99, Will Be Buried In Silver Spring

Funeral services for Mrs. Myra C. Randall, 99, one of Montgomery County's oldest residents, who died Wednesday, were held last night at the Warner Pumphrey funeral home in Silver Spring, Md. Private burial will be today in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

A resident of Spring Street, Silver Spring, for 50 years, Mrs. Randall came to Washington from Illinois in 1865. She was the widow of Lieut. Aaron F. Randall, Civil War officer. She was born in Quebec of American parents.

Surviving are a son, Arthur F. Randall, of Boston, and two daughters, Mrs. Estelle R. Phillips, of Takoma Park, and Mrs. Victor Mindeleff, of Wayside, Md.

Rev. Earl Sims, ChurchBuilder, Dies in West

REV. SIMS

The Rev. Earl D. Sims, 69, of Arlington, Va., credited by friends with having built more small American churches than any other man, died Tuesday in Livingston, Mont. He suffered a heart attack en route home to the residence of his son, Rochester Ford Sims, 4011 Twentieth Road North, Arlington.

Rochester Sims flew to Livingston from Washington on Wednesday in an attempt to reach the bedside of his father before his death.

Virginia churchmen described Dr. Sims as one of the great leaders of the Baptist Church. He was given the official title of "church invigorator," and his job for many years had been construction and repair of country churches physically and spiritually.

A typical recent task was performed in Wyola, Mont., in a wilderness. Dr. Sims went into the woods, cut timber and put to work 35 frontiersmen to build a church for a new congregation.

He always carried a huge trunk filled with tools used in building his churches. He was an electrician, plumber, brickmason and a carpenter, skilled in every line.

Dr. Powell, Alexandria Coroner, Dies

Dr. Llewellyn Powell, 62, Alexandria city coroner since 1934, died there last night following a stroke Monday. He had remained unconscious in his home at 200 North Washington Street since stricken.

A graduate of the 1899 class of Virginia Military Institute and former commander of the Augusta Military Institute at Fort Defiance, Va., Dr. Powell had practiced medicine in Alexandria for more than 35 years.

Returning to Alexandria from the Augusta Military Academy in 1901, he entered the medical school at Columbian College, now George Washington University, where he received his medical degree.

Dr. Powell, who was the son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert C. Powell, of Alexandria, was known as the oldest practicing physician of that city. He was a former chief of staff of Alexandria Hospital and at the time of his death was a member of the consulting staff there and a staff member of Doctors Hospital in Washington.

Entering Army Medical Corps service in the World War as a lieutenant, he later received a commission as major. During the latter part of the was he was in charge of training medical officers at Fort Meade, Md.

Dr. Powell, who held a commission as colonel in the Reserve Officers' Corps, was a member of the Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons and several Scottish Rites Masonic organizations. He also was a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the American Legion.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Willie B. Powell; three sons, H. Ashton, Llewellyn, jr., and Robert C. Powell; two daughters, the Misses Grace P. and Ann Boone Powell; and a sister, Mrs. Louis P. Scott, all of Alexandria. Funeral services for Dr. Powell had not been arranged at a late hour last night.

The Battle Is On

That the Battle of the Atlantic, which had been foreshadowed with the spring extension of daylight, is now under way is indicated in the latest week's tally of British shipping losses. For the week ended March 3 the losses rose to the total of 148,038 tons, consisting of 20 British merchantmen, 8 Allied ships, and 1 neutral vessel. This is at the staggering rate of 7,697,976 tons a year. The sunken tonnage shows the intensified operation of German U-boats, mines, bombing planes, and surface raiders—a composite and familiar weapon from World War I days which is the real secret weapon in the Hitler armory.

During the first year of the war the Nazis sent to the bottom an average of 43,000 tons of enemy and neutral shipping each week. This average, which excluded the losses incident to the withdrawal of the British forces from Dunkerque, has since risen to 63,342 tons, which is at the rate of 3,292,748 tons a year. Since it is estimated that Britain's shipbuilding capacity is well below that total at the present time it is obvious that, even on the basis of the present average, such losses mean the whittling away of the British merchant fleet. But the recent figures are an omen of a rapidly increasing average. For the week ended February 23, losses amounted to 65,557 tons, or more than 2,000 tons above the average, and now comes the current report of 148,038 tons sunk.

Unless the menace of Nazi U-boats and bombers can be met and overcome, Britain's plight might soon become desperate. The British insist that their attitude is "one of anxiety tempered by confidence." Countermeasures now being applied against the raiders are, it is said, producing "particularly successful results." But the latest figures do not bear out this confidence. They do suggest that one of the things the United States must do and do quickly in applying the lease-lend program is to help Britain fight the menace of a German counterblockade which is now too serious to be discounted.

Two Watchdogs Enough

The tabling of the Cox resolution by the House does not reflect any lack of interest on the part of that body in the conduct of the defense program by the executive departments. It is quite evident from the debate on this measure that the House intends to keep itself informed on "how the people's money is being spent." But it also wishes to avoid crippling the Nation's preparedness effort by abuse of the Congressional investigative privilege.

Preliminary plans have been completed for the Senate's inquiry into defense contracts to be conducted by a special seven-man committee headed by Senator Truman. On the House side a somewhat similar investigation by the Military Affairs Committee has been under way for several weeks. Certainly these two committees should be able to keep Congress well informed as to the progress of our defense and aid-to-Britain undertakings. Doubtless it would have been much more satisfactory if the Senate and House had joined in a single inquiry, for the two separate hearings will require a good deal of time from officials whose first obligation is to strengthen our defenses. A third investigation under these circumstances would inevitably give rise to some confusion and might easily serve to hamper the essential work of producing weapons with all possible speed.

Police And The Draft

The District Selective Service Appeals Board has taken proper advantage of its powers in putting a policeman in a deferred class. Local authorities are charged in the Selective Service Act with the duty of permitting their communities sufficient protection. The board had to take into consideration a special situation existing here—a shortage of policemen. It acted commendably on the facts before it.

The Post has pointed out repeatedly the dangers of blanket exemptions, and commendation of the Appeals Board's action does not represent any retreat from that stand. The board not only has not set any national precedent but has not even set any local precedent. Though the assumption is that essential members of the police force will henceforth be deferred, the board will continue to treat each case on its own merits. If it learns that any man who appeals is not essential, it will deny deferment, and, in the words of one official, if a policeman is to be deferred "he has got to be a good policeman."

District Crisis

Washington's problem of modifying the local income tax has been swallowed up by the larger dilemma of supplying revenue to meet the expanding demands upon the city. The refusal of the House to eliminate the inequities of the income tax has merely intensified the crisis which the city is facing. Certainly the question of amending the income-tax law must be raised again, but it is now a minor segment of a much larger undertaking. The most pressing need is for a large increase in District revenue.

The boom in Anacostia is a perfect illustration of the new responsibility which the city must meet. During the last ten years Anacostia has almost doubled its population. Now it is undergoing mushroom growth. It is estimated that by September 1, 60,000 persons will be living there as compared with a count of 45,000 in the 1940 census. Obviously that will throw a heavy burden upon the city to provide new schools, streets, sewers, police and fire protection and other municipal services. The problem will be the greater because public improvements of this sort have lagged behind the growth in population even in normal times.

Expansion of the Capital City to accommodate the thousands who are rushing here to take defense jobs is an integral part of our preparedness program. The work of rearmament will not be done efficiently unless workmen have decent living quarters in the vicinity of their jobs as well as schools for their children and the other essentials of community life. Yet it is obviously impossible for the District to supply these improvements without funds. Congress faces the necessity of substantially increasing District revenue as a means of keeping the defense program in full swing.

For many of the new buildings and streets needed funds might well be borrowed. A community cannot finance an emergency expansion from current revenue any more satisfactorily than can an airplane manufacturer. Congress ought to make loans available to the District for this purpose through the PWA or some other agency. In addition it must provide funds for the operation of the needed facilities, and this will require a far more serious mood than that assumed by the House in scuttling the income-tax amendments. Chairman Randolph of the District Committee warns us that the House will not accept a sales tax. The real estate tax is already too high (considering the 100 per cent valuations) and a further boost would tend to discourage urgently needed residential building. So if Congress persists in its refusal to permit the District to tax the income of Government employes living here, the only reasonable alternative will be a larger Federal payment to the District.

In effect, therefore, the House has greatly accentuated the importance of the forthcoming hearings upon the Overton bill to bring about a new division of District expenses between the national and local governments. District officials and legislators struggling with the city's fiscal problem are now in an excellent position to demand enactment of the Overton formula as the only means of averting a crisis that would seriously affect the national defense program.

By Japan's Dictation

The treaty whereby French Indo-China ceded some 25,000 square miles of territory in Cambodia and Laos to Thailand was aptly characterized by Vichy as a purely Franco-Japanese agreement. The French could have resisted the irredentist claims of the Thailanders indefinitely, even though these claims were backed up by warlike measures. They could not resist the pressure from Tokyo which was behind the Bangkok government's belligerency in spite of the fact that Japan assumed the role of mediator. Indeed, the advantages which Thailand is likely to derive from the territorial gains made at the expense of her neighbor will probably prove only relative and temporary. It is understood, for instance, that Japan has already obtained assurances from the South Asian kingdom that the entire rice output of the ceded territory will be placed at Tokyo's disposal.

Now that a precedent has been established for Japanese intervention in the Thailand-Indo China area, moreover, it can be taken for granted that Tokyo will not hesitate to intervene again when and if it suits her interests to do so. In the meantime both Thailand and Indo-China have been forced to give Japan assurances that they will never join any hostile combination directed against the island empire. In the vocabulary of the aggressor states this usually marks the penultimate stage in the destruction of a nation's independence. The upshot of all the maneuverings in southeast Asia since the fall of France is that Indo-China and Thailand now occupy the same position in Japan's "coprosperity sphere" that Slovakia, Rumania and Bulgaria occupy in Hitler's "new order."

Charters For Business

In his final summing-up statement as chairman of the Temporary National Economic Committee, Senator O'Mahoney recommends Federal chartering or licensing of corporations doing an interstate business. Some years ago the Senator from Wyoming introduced a bill with that purpose in mind and he now reiterates his long-held belief that effective enforcement of the antitrust laws would be greatly aided by a Federal licensing system. The proposal is not urged as a means of imposing new and drastic controls upon business enterprise, but rather as a device that would forestall less desirable forms of discretionary regulation in piecemeal fashion "through the continued multiplication of Government boards and commissions."

So long as the Government's powers in this sphere were believed to be limited the substitution of Federal for State incorporation of interstate business concerns would have served no good purpose. Today, however, the situation is radically changed; State regulation has already been largely superseded by Federal control over the Nation's major industries. Congress has extended its authority to cover fixation of minimum wages and maximum hours in establishments whose products enter interstate commerce. Through the National Labor Relations Act it has subjected employer-employe relations to new and sweeping forms of control. Through the SEC it regulates the flotation of new capital issues by corporations whose securities are sold across State lines. Ever since the passage of the Sherman Act 50 years ago, moreover, enforcement of antitrust legislation has been hampered by the laxity of State laws providing for incorporation of companies doing an interstate business. In some cases the States have deliberately framed their laws to enable business concerns to avoid compliance with Federal laws. In other cases, the States have simply been unable to regulate the activities of interstate concerns because of the geographical extent of their operations.

Senator O'Mahoney is doubtless right in concluding that we "cannot hope to stop the processes of concentration if we are willing to continue to allow the States to create the agencies through and by which the concentration has been brought about." He believes that the Federal Government (which has the sole power of regulation over interstate commerce) should write the contracts that "call into existence the corporations which carry on that commerce," at the same time defining their duties and responsibilities. This proposal appears to be a logical and inevitable result of the increasing concentration of business power and the consequent decreasing efficacy of State regulation of business. But acceptance of Senator O'Mahoney's plan in principle is only a first step. He is wise in suggesting that the details of such important legislation should be formulated with extreme care, possibly by a national conference on corporation law called together by Congress to formulate a legislative program.

Bar Library

The District Bar Association has adopted a "better-late-than-never" policy in amending its by-laws so that all members of the bar may use its library. It happens that the association's library is the only complete collection available for persons using the District Court Building. The library has been in the courthouse for 66 years and now is housed free of cost. White lawyers could gain access to the books by joining the association, but colored attorneys, because they are not eligible for membership, had no comparable facilities. After the association rejected a compromise plan to let women and Negro attorneys use separate rooms, Attorney General Jackson ruled that the library would have to be opened to all members of the bar if it continued to occupy space in the District Court Building after April 1. The Bar Association has wisely chosen the more liberal alternative, and if the $8 annual fee for lawyers outside the association is acceptable to the Attorney General, the dispute will be settled. The only unfortunate aspect of this outcome is that a showdown was necessary to bring it about.

THE CHILL OF EVENING

We put on armor
As we grow older
Which instead of warmer
Makes us colder,
Until all degrees
Of emotion freeze.

For sorrows of others
We bring no healing.
We have no brothers.
We live unfeeling,
A nerveless slice
Of insensate ice.

With rain and thunder
There is no coping.
There is no wonder,
Fearing or hoping.
All is lost
But eternal frost.

Merit, Not Birth

As Shakespeare might have said, "much ado about nothing," is being stirred up in the tempest over whether a Russian-born but naturalized American citizen can sit on the Public Utilities Commission of the District of Columbia. Since when has it become a question of discriminating against the foreign-born, naturalized Americans who have shown their worth in doing better things for their adopted country? We are not living under a dictatorship, the land is still free, and there is still plenty of opportunity for all Americans and naturalized Americans who are loyal to the country of their birth and the Nation they have adopted. If Gregory Hankin does not prove his mettle after a trial, then, and only then, will it be time to ask for his resignation in the good old American way. If we are to expect loyalty from our foreign born, we've got to meet them halfway.

This Man Hitler

How ludicrous are Hitler's frauds. Like a vulture atop his mountain of corpses, he poses as the dove of peace, screaming "warmonger" at peaceful America and at all peoples who oppose his mad orgy of fiendishness against the human race. And this at a time when it is historic that every country outside the gangster nations has scandalized itself in vain attempts to bribe him from his diabolical intent.

Then he further insults intelligence by another pose—this one as a hero—the avenger of a wronged Reich—wronged because she was stopped in a former crusade of violence against innocent, inoffensive peoples under the Kaiser's lust for glory.

For Featherless Hats

Over a period of years the National Audubon Society and leading American magazines have made frequent protests against the slaughter of birds for millinery. Today the massacre of the birds is on again. A short time ago on an island in the Pacific 25,000 albatross were killed by hunters for the sole purpose of supplying feathers for women's hats.

When many species of our most beautiful birds, such as the osprey and the blue heron, had been threatened with extinction, a law was passed imposing heavy penalties for their slaughter.

But today, our American women again want feathers on their hats, and the millinery bootlegger is out to supply that demand. Nearly 50 species of birds are being hunted—many of them in defiance of laws passed for their protection—and the feathers are dyed, molded and disguised, so that it is difficult to detect the original species.

With the demand constantly growing—as millions of women emulate the Indians and stick feathers in their headgear—it does not take much imagination to realize what will happen to countless numbers of beautiful and useful birds.

Bomb Outrage

Those well acquainted with Bulgarian ways will not be surprised at the astounding news that George W. Rendel, British Minister to Bulgaria, escaped assassination in a bomb explosion at an Istanbul hotel, where some persons were killed and several others injured. From 1920 to 1934, Bulgaria was the scene of continuous bomb outrages, which the government of Bulgaria traced to an infamous revolutionary Bulgarian organization known as I. M. R. O., directed by the notorious Ivan Michailoff. There is no doubt that the hidden time bomb among the luggage was intended for the departing British Minister from Sofia, who had a near death experience of the bomb technique of the above-mentioned Bulgarian assassin organization.

Apparently the Bulgarian government did not entirely eradicate this outlawed organization. It is equally sad that those responsible officials of that government having charge of its foreign policy have again fallen, for the second time within a quarter of a century, on the wrong side to the interest of Bulgaria. Ostensibly, they care naught for their domestic tranquillity nor to maintain peace with their neighbors.

They were excellent, and I hope that all the readers of The Post have taken the trouble to read them. I particularly enjoyed the article entitled: "U. S. Urges Deferred Purchasing Power To Forestall Inflation

One of the chief problems now facing our Nation is how to avoid inflation caused by the release of huge sums of money through Government spending.

During the greater part of the past 10 years there has been a relative per capita shrinkage in the production of consumption goods and services to meet an actual per capita shrinkage of purchasing power. Now, because of the national defense program, we have an expanding per capita purchasing power at a time when the consumption goods and services industries are in no position to expand rapidly to meet increased consumer demand due to this newly released purchasing power.

The hundreds of thousands of additional workers going into defense industries are receiving hundreds of millions of dollars of additional wages and salaries. The workers in the defense industries do not buy back the things they produce—that is, war equipment. Armament is purchased only by government. The additional wages and salaries that represent this armament production flow into the consumption goods and services markets to buy food, clothing, shelter, medical and dental care, recreation, etc. Unless the production of consumption goods and services expands rapidly enough to meet the increased demand caused by this newly released purchasing power, the competition of buyers for the relatively limited supply of consumption goods and services will raise prices and lead to inflation.

It is obvious, to be sure, that some consumption and services will be forthcoming without raising prices, either because they already exist in surplus, if goods, or else have considerable unused time or space, if services. Our doctors and dentists, for example, are in position to take on many additional clients because many of them have been relatively unoccupied. Our railroads can haul much more freight and passengers before they are operating at capacity. Wheat farmers and cotton farmers can supply a greatly augmented demand from existing unused surpluses. So we cannot say that newly released purchasing power need necessarily create rising prices and inflation in all lines of consumption goods and services.

But we cannot say that this situation exists generally. Within the past year meat products have risen 10 per cent, clothing about 12 per cent, and rents, especially in the neighborhood of defense activities, have skyrocketed. When we speak of the price situation as a whole, we must say that there is a rise in the general price level. What has happened this past year is only an indication of what will happen on a vastly augmented scale the next few years if something is not done to head it off.

Inflation could be forestalled in large measure if we adopted some program to defer presently released purchasing power, to the extent it is excessive, until after the present national defense emergency is over. This could be done by adopting the following measures:

1. Establish minimum wages, salaries, and rates of profit to be paid by employers and corporations in money—that is, in present purchasing power.

2. Set up graduated payments in U. S. bonds—that is, in deferred purchasing power, for wages, salaries and profits above these minimums.

3. Have these special U. S. bonds redeemable after the national defense emergency. For example, an A-series of such bonds issued during 1941 due for payment during the first year after the termination of the emergency, a B-series issued in 1942 and due for payment the second year after the termination of the emergency, etc.

4. Require all employers of labor and all corporations paying profits to buy such bonds to pay out to workers and to stockholders.

The graduated scale for such special U. S. bonds will be equal to the income tax scale in the lower and middle income tax brackets. A person paying 4 per cent income tax would be required to take another 4 per cent of his wages or salary in these special U. S. bonds, etc., up to the point where bonds would absorb all income in excess of the income tax. It is probable that such special bonds should be registered and put in escrow for their owners until after the termination of the national emergency.

Such a program would defer present purchasing power above the normal and thus forestall inflation. It would also provide the purchasing power for after the emergency, when sorely needed to expand consumption industries and reabsorb workers from defense activities.

Trout For Breakfast

Six people and 12 precious trout flies—frying pan and fishing rods—a ton of enthusiasm and 5 pounds of bacon (for emergency use only) piled into an old car in quest of trout and adventure.

There was El Capitan, the Angler; Dora, the maker of biscuits; the professor, the artist who never angled at all, and the two little "Wogs." Rolling down the highway, Medford and Lynn were passed in a flash. Soon came a blue lake hemmed in by green fields—then down to Marysville amid the roar of rushing water. Wedged deep in the gorge's throat, a mighty dam bent across the Murmuredge River and there, below the giant spillway, white waters raced and trout cavorted. So did El Capitan, from rock to rock, for two hot days, returning to camp each night to chew sadly on biscuits and rashers of bacon. No wonder he thought the fishing might be better upstream.

What was that? Grasshoppers for bait! One corrupted camper even boasted of his success. That was too much for El Capitan, whose veins flowed with true sporting blood, so he and his patient band of bacon-eaters said goodby to Marysville and its elusive trout and headed their rubber-heeled steed for Wee Jasper, where the Murmuredge runs cold and clear.

In the shade of great oaks, fishermen dotted the pebbled bank while the tantalizing aroma of frying trout filled El Capitan's soul with a new-born joy. At the river's edge the two little Wogs innocently liberated six fat trout—carefully corralled for a camper's meal. But trout were plentiful, the forgiving owner declared—plentiful if one used grasshoppers for bait. Grasshoppers again — what nonsense! Why, with "Shoorbyte" and "Katchem," with dry fly and wet fly, what more did one need but an angler's skill?

While Dora greased the biscuit-pan, the professor mused, the artist painted, and the two little Wogs splashed, El Capitan hied upstream armed with rod and his 12 treasured flies. Artfully he played his line, cunningly he hid behind boulders and blackberry bushes—undaunted he waded—on and on—hungry but determined—but alas! When he stumbled into camp that night his spirits were as low as the sun, for he had angled all day in vain. The menu for supper was biscuits and bacon again!

Spurred on by defeat, nothing was seen of El Capitan the next day. Before breakfast two Scotchmen clad in striped pajamas passed with a sympathetic smile and tossed six fat trout into Dora's empty frying pan, claiming that with grasshoppers and only with grasshoppers they had landed 60 trout in two days! Oh, blessed are those without pride! Decision stamped the features of El Capitan when he returned empty-handed that night. There were streams higher up, he said, unpolluted by Scotchmen and grasshoppers.

So on to Gingerbella they went, and there again El Capitan's soul was stirred by what he saw. Here the stream tumbled swift and full; here the trout would be uncontaminated by grasshoppers; here at last lay the true angler's paradise; here . . . But a change had suddenly swept over El Capitan's hopeful face. Crouched on knees, deep in grass, three frantic-looking objects were swatting and bounding hither and thither. Approaching curiously, the artist asked, "What! After big game?" One replied, "Aye, laddie, the beggars are harder to catch than the trout." It was all too plain: three more Scotchmen and grasshoppers again!

Morning came and another day passed. El Capitan, with his 12 faithful flies, fought like a martyr for his ideals and heard naught upon his return but cries from the two little Wogs—"We want trout! We want trout!"—everyone, in fact, was starving for trout.

Torn by a sportsman's conscience, El Capitan passed a restless night. He had battled long and nobly. Would he stoop to grasshoppers or would he not? That was the burning question and it was answered at dawn by mutiny in the camp. Five ferocious bacon-eaters handed El Capitan a hatful of grasshoppers, threatening him, on pain of death, not to show his face again unless laden with trout. It was an expectant band, indeed, that awaited El Capitan's return. In less than an hour he came rushing into camp, bent double with his catch. As trout sizzled in the pan El Capitan's honor was restored. Never was trout more eagerly devoured—more heartily encored. If a roguish twinkle lighted El Capitan's eye, the others were too busy to notice it.

Late that night, as the two Wogs lay asleep and the others mused by the fire, El Capitan broke the deep silence. "I might as well tell you now that those grasshoppers were a lie and a delusion. How did I catch all those trout? I decided to string my line with every fly I had and give the trout one more sporting chance. That combination did the trick. 12 snappy flies—I'll never fish without them again."

As he spoke, everyone there, knowing El Capitan, believed him. Would you?

The Wire-Tapping Bill

I LISTENED last Sunday night to a debate on the Hobbs bill on the Forum of the Air, conducted from Washington by Theodore Granick. The purpose of the Hobbs bill is to repeal the court decision that prohibits law enforcement authorities to tap telephone wires. The bill was defended by Congressman Hobbs, who is responsible for it, and by Assistant Attorney General Holtzoff. It was attacked by Arthur Garfield Hays, the well known liberal lawyer, and by Lee Pressman, counsel for the C. I. O.

THOMPSON

IT SEEMED to me that in the entire debate the issue was never once simply stated. It is simply whether the law enforcement authorities of this country have the right and the duty to exercise police control over the waves and wires of the air in the pursuit of lawbreakers. They do police the railroads, the highways and the mails. May they police the telephone, or is it alone to be a free territory and a happy hunting ground for criminals?

Mr. Hays' argument was that the policing of the wires constitutes an infringement on civil liberties. Why? Why is it any more of an infringement on civil liberties than the policing of a street, or of a highway? Or of an apartment house?

One of the speakers said that the difficulty is that it is impossible to tap the wire of a suspect without listening in to and recording many perfectly innocent conversations, perhaps intimate ones, and so enable the police to become party to private information which is none of their business.

BUT IT IS impossible to police anything without becoming party to extraneous and sometimes intimate information.

If a murder is committed in an apartment house, and the evidence indicates that it was committed by some one resident in the building, every tenant of that house will be watched by detectives. It can be very unpleasant. The detectives may find out intimate details about the lives of people wholly innocent of the crime. And if such discoveries are known to the persons involved, they will no doubt feel that their freedom of action has been infringed upon.

The highways are policed. If a suspected kidnaper has been described to the police as traveling in a maroon-colored automobile with a New York license plate, it is bad luck for all the innocent people who are also traveling the highways in maroon-colored automobiles with any sort of license plates. The innocent individuals, however, put up with the inconveniences and humiliations because it is in their larger social interest that kidnapers should be apprehended.

IT CAN be argued that no member of the police may enter and search a man's home without a warrant, and that wire tapping constitutes just such unwarranted search. Certainly the citizenry should be protected from arbitrary intrusion into their private affairs. But surely, also, some way can be found to police the wires without arbitrary intrusion. How, for instance, are the mails policed? Obviously they must be, because if they were not, how would it be possible to enforce the law forbidding the use of the mails with intention to defraud?

THE ARGUMENT was also put forth—I think by Mr. Hays—that we want no "Gestapo" in this country. Why does policing telephone wires mean a Gestapo?

A great confusion of thinking arises from statements like that one. A Gestapo is a special party police for a special kind of state. It is the weapon which a tyrannous state uses to intimidate a whole population. The Gestapo or the OGPU have invented no new police methods, as far as I know. They have only made them more universal—and applied them to the purpose of maintaining a despotism.

That party police is also empowered to arrest anyone they choose and hold him in durance vile for unlimited time without trial, or try him in star chamber proceedings and sentence him without benefit of counsel.

To imply that the police authorities of a democratic state ruled by laws which define misdemeanors, felonies and crimes under a constitution which guarantees freedom of political opinion becomes identical with a Gestapo if it polices telephone wires is just plain nonsense.

No democratic state has ever been destroyed by the police of that state. On the contrary, the laxness of the police of democratic states has helped to make it possible for conspirators to bring down the democratic state and erect a tyrannous one in its place. The Gestapos have followed the collapse of the democratic state, not preceded it.

IF WE EVER have a Gestapo in the United States, it will be because we have allowed to come into power a party and government determined to destroy the democratic law. The Gestapo did not create Hitler. Hitler created the Gestapo as his instrument, after the German people had elected him. The downfall of the German Republic was not due to the Gestapo, which did not exist when it was destroyed. It was due in part to the republic's extremely generous treatment of the enemies of democracy. It was due to the feebleminded idea current in most free societies that one cannot adequately defend freedom without destroying it.

One thing that creates a predilection toward fascism among the people is the breakdown of law and order. Where crime is rampant and goes unpunished the people incline toward even a tyranny if it promises them relief from those who prey upon the social body. The German and the Spanish republics were so libertarian that they could not protect the people from wild strikes, from constant street fights and from the organization and operation of gangs falsely calling themselves parties and patriots and appealing to liberty for the right to create social chaos. No state that cannot maintain order will continue to live.

THIS DEMOCRACY has a crime record which is ominous. The millions of automobiles, the network of motor highways, the lack of any border police between States, the absence of any universal system of registration all put the officers of the law under grave handicaps. We certainly do not want internal police frontiers and universal police registration, but neither do we want gangsterism rampant; neither do we want espionage and sabotage. And in this particular time of the world we certainly want an efficient counterespionage against the enemies of this democracy who have insinuated themselves into the country and are doing their own wire tapping and carrying out their own liquidations.

The whole kit and kaboodle of them operate continually with the telephone, and under the present law it is forbidden to police the telephone. Under the present law, if I am the victim of a kidnaper or a blackmailer who chooses to communicate with me by telephone, I may not even call in the police to tap my own wire in an effort to protect me against the criminal. The policing of the telephone should be limited to suspects of major crimes to be defined in the law. Then it can be intrusted to a civilized state.

INEXPERIENCE, inadequate laws and inadequate means of getting evidence are the very things that lead to police abuse—to extorted confessions, to "framings," and to the prosecution of major criminals for minor offenses, because evidence on the major crimes cannot be secured.

The telephone is a public instrument constantly used by criminals and to say that it cannot be policed is to offer an open invitation to criminals to use it freely for their purposes. If privileged information obtained by such policing is used against innocent persons, there are legal means of dealing with such abuses. If there are not, they should be created.

Feeding France

By Ernest K. Lindley

Recurring Problem

LINDLEY

The British are against it. Many of our diplomatic and military experts are in doubt. William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, says he can see "no justification" for not sending unoccupied France all the food it needs. Ninety-five per cent of the French want England to win, he asserts, and starvation will only drive them into the arms of the Germans.

Bullitt unquestionably has deep sympathy for the French. But whatever else he is, he is not pro-Axis. Nobody has been more eloquent in trying to stir this country to a sense of national danger. His warnings of the consequences to us of a Nazi victory over Great Britain have been so emotional that it is doubtful whether they have been persuasive. But Bullitt, who betrays a state of mind close to fright in his public discussions of the Nazi peril, favors sending unoccupied France all the food it needs. He favors it because he thinks it would encourage French resistance to the Nazis.

Others high in official circles agree with Bullitt's appraisal. Among them is Secretary of Agriculture Wickard. When a Secretary of Agriculture favors exporting food he may be suspected merely of furthering the interests of agriculture. But Wickard, in the months since he succeeded Henry Wallace at the Department of Agriculture, has pretty consistently taken a broad view of the farmers' interests. Even now he and the department are under fire from sections of the farm lobby.

Wickard is entirely committed to aid to England and to the defeat of the Axis. And so are many other high officials who favor sending food to unoccupied France.

SENTIMENT — humanitarian feelings—should have nothing to do with the decision. The supreme national policy to which we are now committed is aid to the nations which are fighting the Triple Alliance. We are going to spend billions of dollars in support of that policy. In the end, we may risk some American lives—in the Navy, if not in the Army.

Any policy or action abroad which nullifies or impairs the effectiveness of that supreme policy naturally must be discarded. The real question—probably the sole question—is whether or not sending food to France would aid or hinder the Axis. Bullitt thinks it would hinder the Axis.

Undoubtedly France's present plight, with respect to food as well as to everything else, is due to the Nazis. It is not proposed in any responsible quarter to permit France to stock up with food which the Nazis might seize. The Nazis already have the chief food-producing areas of France. The inroads which they have already made there and in other occupied areas on food stores and on livestock and poultry portend extremely short rations for the native populations, and eventually for the Nazis themselves.

The best distributing agency for food in unoccupied France probably would continue to be the American Red Cross. Children are the first to be considered. And dried or evaporated milk and vitamins, to prevent rickets and other effects of malnutrition, are the prime needs. The distribution of foods which is identified as American in origin should be good propaganda. It should be better propaganda if it is distributed by American personnel.

SIMILAR ARGUMENTS apply to Spain. The practical question now is not whether the Spanish government is desirable. It is the extent to which it cooperates with the Axis, or refuses to do so. Many experts think that one of the chief deterrents to a march to Gibraltar by the Nazi legions is the lack of food in Spain. There is none to feed the Nazis, and if they entered Spain they would risk continual disturbances if they did not supply food also to the Spaniards. A stream of food for current needs which could be cut off at any moment would not help the Nazis, and might well strengthen the opposition of the Spanish government and people to cooperation with the Nazis.

Feeding unoccupied France and Spain remain separate questions from feeding the populations of territory already in full possession of the Nazis. There is no disposition in high quarters in Washington to support Herbert Hoover's plan for feeding any of these peoples. The British verdict on the Hoover plan is accepted as correct—at least for the present.

As to unoccupied France, the same officials are more disposed to dispute the soundness of the British analysis. The British are carrying the main burden of the war, but they have blundered before, and may do it again. As a partner which is well-informed but further removed from the scene and perhaps better situated to make a cold analysis, the United States Government may well have better judgment on what to do about unoccupied France than the British have.

Official opinion in Washington is divided, with many minds doubtful, but on balance is more inclined toward feeding unoccupied France than the British seem to be. Whatever aid we give there need not deprive our own people or interfere with the shipment to Britain of whatever food is needed there. The Department of Agriculture explains how we can easily meet all foreseeable demands. Just a little more feed for our livestock will do it—and we have plenty of feedstuffs which, if the extreme farm lobbyists are blocked, can be kept at reasonable prices.

Japan's Matsuoka

By Mark J. Gayn

(Author of the forthcoming book, "The Fight For The Pacific.")

Crusader Against The Western World

THE RANKING Messiah of Japanese aggression today is a stubby, bemustached, bright-eyed, youngish man named Yosuke Matsuoka.

Officially, Matsuoka is Foreign Minister. Off the record—and with every justification — Matsuoka denies he is a diplomat. His particular job, he believes, is to lead Japan to unchallengeable supremacy in the western Pacific, from Kamchatka to the East Indies.

Today, the outstanding and integral part of Japan's and Matsuoka's "mission" is to push the United States back into the eastern Pacific—away from the rich Asiatic markets, away from the sources of vital raw materials, away from strategical sea lanes, bases and political footholds. Matsuoka takes a particular delight in this task, for he—more than any other Japanese empire-builder—hates the United States with a bitter, hungry and frustrated hatred. This month and the past, Matsuoka's vehemence has enabled his anti-American diatribes to shoulder their way past news of African battles and Balkan squabbles into the front pages of the world.

This hatred of America, of the entire democratic philosophy and way of life, is pathological with Matsuoka. And the obsession is all the more strange because Matsuoka received his education and his start in life in the United States.

MATSUOKA returned to Japan in 1903 with a rich lexicon, an empty purse and a vast store of ambition, and at once joined the foreign service. His first assignment was as consul in Shanghai, and he reveled in his new duties and responsibilities. The empire-builder was learning the political ropes.

His promotion was slow. He did his job well, but promotion was the reward of greying hairs, not brilliance. He served as consul general in North China and Manchuria and during the World War was recalled to Tokyo to head the foreign ministry's information bureau. The man holding this post is Japan's spokesman. His are the words the world consumes with its morning coffee. Matsuoka was a good spokesman. So good, in fact, that in quick succession the foreign minister and the premier asked him to serve as their secretary.

In 1919, Matsuoka went to the Versailles Conference. Another man on the Japanese delegation was Prince Fumimaro Konoye, today Japan's premier. Matsuoka returned home with latent contempt for the Occident and a conviction that sooner or later Japan would assert herself over her rivals.

His next job gave him the cue. He became a director of the octopus South Manchuria Railway Co., which he himself later described as the "East India Company" of Japan. He remained with this company for a decade, doing the spadework for the conquest of Manchuria. He acquired a thorough knowledge of the Chinese people, experience in handling billion-yen projects, intimate contacts with Japanese warlords.

In 1931, finally, the Japanese Kwantung army seized Manchuria. And while the democracies waved their arms in Geneva, the war spread to Shanghai. Tokyo found Matsuoka an invaluable man. He not only possessed first-hand knowledge of Manchuria and a supple intellect, but also the ability to convey his ideas to the foreigners in their own cliches. Thus, Matsuoka was ordered to Shanghai as an envoy extraordinary in charge of press relations. From his glib tongue came the most persuasive defense of Japanese aggression; out of his easy "man-to-man" contacts with foreign correspondents many a Japanese argument found its way into the press abroad.

TOKYO HAD GOOD reasons to admire Matsuoka's work. And when the Japanese diplomats in Geneva were found incapable of holding their ground against the fluent, able Chinese spokesmen, Matsuoka was rushed to Europe to present the Japanese case before the league—and the hostile world.

He had no better luck in swaying international public opinion than his predecessors. But he, at least, contributed to the historical session the glitter and drama which it otherwise lacked. Some foreign correspondents later described him as illogical. One—Clarence Streit—branded him a "pathological case." But none could deny either Matsuoka's great ability or his extraordinary gift of oratory.

In March, 1933, Matsuoka defiantly led his delegation out of the league. Although the world did not realize it, he had written the league's death verdict. At home, he received the welcome of a conquering hero. Twenty thousand cheering patriots met him at the docks. Imperial messengers solemnly presented him with gifts of fish and sake.

It was a reception to turn anyone's head. Matsuoka went to his Tokyo residence to await the imperial command to form a new cabinet. But the command did not come. It was assassination time in Japan, and there seemed to be little to choose between the philosophy of the patriotic killers and Matsuoka's own.

Matsuoka felt grievously offended—the country had failed to appreciate his services. He decided to awaken the nation to its ills, cures and responsibilities. His motto was "One Emperor, One Nation, One Party." For this advocacy of a totalitarian party, he was compelled to resign his seat in the Diet. Now in white heat, he started stumping the country in the interest of ultra-nationalist, anti-capitalist "reforms," and made a couple of propaganda movies.

His reward came from the army. The Kwantung army's plans for the militarization of Manchuria demanded vigorous support from the South Manchuria Railway Co. Its president could not supply it. He was jettisoned and Matsuoka was offered the post.

Under Matsuoka's guidance, the company doubled its capitalization to nearly $200,000,000, spread its tentacles to every corner, every field of endeavor in Manchuria. It poured funds into the expansion of coal and iron mines, into steel mills, into the liquefaction of coal, into the cultivation of soya bean, the construction of cities, highways and rail lines, into the operation of hotels, hospitals and model farms; into a thousand and one other projects.

AS MANY OTHER Japanese empire-builders, Matsuoka knew that sooner or later North China would be drawn into Nippon's political and military orbit. He, therefore, began to urge the government to let him take charge of North China's "manchukuozation." The government, torn between fear of the army and a desire to serve big business (which did not want Matsuoka to poach upon its Chinese preserves) temporized.

But while Matsuoka was eyeing North China, Manchuria was going through a mild revolution. It had finally dawned on the Kwantung army that its ambitious five-year industrial plan was being "sabotaged" by the super-trusts. The conquest of China, by opening new avenues of investments, threatened to dry further the funds trickling into Manchuria. Something had to be done at once.

The Kwantung army decided to sacrifice Matsuoka. He was a stumbling block to cooperation with big business and he was spending entirely too much time on the wrong side of the Great Wall.

Thus, the army began to pluck the nicest feathers off the South Manchuria Railway Co. When Matsuoka discovered that his great "East India Company" had been reduced to a mere railway—minus its coal mines, steel mills and automobile plants—he resigned. Unhappily he returned to Tokyo in March, 1939, to await a political crisis that would bring the ultra-nationalists to the fore. The great opportunity came only 16 months later.

When Prince Konoye sailed into power in July, 1940, on the wings of Hitlerian victories, he brought with him a group of Fascists from Manchuria. Among them was Matsuoka. And within a week—his hatreds now the official hatreds of Japan—he informed the democracies that Japan was "through with toadying" and would cooperate with the Axis. Ten weeks later, Japan became a military ally of Germany and Italy, in a pact expressly directed against the United States.

In recent weeks, Matsuoka got himself in political hot water by suggesting mediation to Britain without the consent of either the army or Germany. The misstep might cost him his ministerial head. But even out of office, he will remain a potent influence in Japanese diplomacy and a champion of a holy crusade to stamp American and British interests out of the Oriental soil.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

A Nonunion Job

WELL, SIR, you just would be surprised to learn how simple this proposition is whether you join a union as a preliminary to catching a job on a big Government building operation in a community where the people aren't a mind to join and pay. If they aren't a mind to they simply don't, and the money which they otherwise would have paid to local unioneers and strangers sent in to shake them down is theirs to do with as they like.

PEGLER

The Army post of Fort Bragg is one of the biggest in the country, and it has been an open shop job from the beginning, except that in the plumbing and steamfitting contracts the unions were allowed to provide the help until they ran out of men. When all their members were at work and still more men were needed, nonunion men were hired.

Quarters and service buildings, such as hospitals, warehouses and movie theaters, shops, sheds and laundries, have been building to accommodate a force of about 65,000 men. The work began last September and is now 87 per cent finished and it is safe to say that the shakedown union, which has been extorting money from the pick-and-shovel hands on most other jobs of the kind throughout the United States, didn't pick up a $5 bill here.

The carpenters are almost all farmers living in a neighboring region embracing five counties, who had time on their hands, anyway, during the winter, and such skill as a man needs to keep his buildings mended and replace any that burn down.

ALTOGETHER about 45,000 men have been hired and paid for more or less time at 65 different occupations having to do with the construction of buildings and roads, mains, sewers and all the other work that constitute a big cantonment for soldiers, and while union men have been welcome, no man has been barred because he didn't belong to a union and refused to do business with the collector. The work is now in the final stages, so this is one big Government defense job, at least, which has been an almost total loss to the carpet-bagging unioneer.

In a way, however, they all had the benefit of collective bargaining, because the pay was established by the United States Department of Labor. Carpenters have been drawing 90 cents an hour and working 48 hours a week, plumbers $1.25 an hour and laborers 30 cents an hour. That is correct—30 cents an hour for laborers, mostly colored farm hands, or only $14.40 for a 48-hour week, and the bargaining agent on their behalf was the Department of Labor—a fact which apparently gives official support to the contention that living is cheap around here for Negroes, as it should be, considering the sort of living it is; but, anyway, this employment has been a windfall for almost all concerned who otherwise would have been earning, in round numbers, nothing during the months consumed on the Fort.

The job has been a lucky break for the whole region, and it has been moving along swiftly toward a day, soon to come, when the contractors can drag their clutter off the big military reservation and clear out, so that the soldiers may really settle down to prepare to finish that war.

The speed of the work undoubtedly has been the greater for the absence of union business agents on the prowl to catch men driving too many nails per hour and haggling over minute questions of jurisdiction, such as that in Dayton, where a whole job was shut down because the C. I. O. sent in four electricians of special skill to do a specific job, and they were protested by the job-trust in power.

THE NORTH CAROLINA workers and a scattering drawn from a few other Southern States just refused to have any truck with the unions, reducing the question to its simplest terms, which have been fogged out of sight by arguments in the last few years. No man's right to join a union was contested, but most of the men stood on their right not to join, and their right, as American citizens, to work at their legitimate occupation, nevertheless.

They are mostly of Anglo-Saxon stock, and mostly native not only to the United States but to the region, and many undoubtedly have relatives and friends in uniform living in the barracks which already are turned over to the Army. Patriotism is rife among them, and foreignism and the sabotage of a defense work as a means of advancing the narrow interests of a union or the graft of a shakedown business agent would have been something on the order of treason to their way of thinking. And every dollar they earned has been theirs.

The Weakest Point

By Barnet Nover

Rise In British Shipping Losses

IN THE SINGLE month of April, 1917, a total of 849,000 tons of British, Allied and neutral shipping was sent to the bottom by German U-boats. British shipping losses alone, during the spring of that year, averaged 409,300 tons a month, or at the rate of nearly 5,000,000 tons a year. Says Winston Churchill in his book, "The World Crisis":

NOVER

"If losses continued at this rate and were equally divided among the services exposed to attack, the tonnage available for trade at the beginning of 1918 would be reduced to under 5,000,000 tons—that is to say, an amount almost exactly equal to the gross sinkings in 1917. It seemed that time, hitherto counted as an incorruptible ally, was about to change sides."

AS IT HAPPENED Great Britain was not starved out by the German counterblockade. The submarine menace was countered before irreparable damage had been done. The extension of the convoy system, the blocking of Zeebrugge by Admiral Keyes and of Helgoland Bight by a mine barrage laid by the British and American fleets—these and other antisubmarine measures put into effect by the Allies ultimately had their effect.

By the end of 1917 the danger had largely passed. Ships continued to be sunk by German U-boats. Losses in the third quarter of 1918, when Germany was nearing surrender, reached a total of over 900,000 tons. But the rate of shipping losses declined steadily after the spring of 1917 while the output of shipbuilding steadily increased. In the spring of 1918 more ships were being built than the Germans were able to sink.

IF GREAT BRITAIN is to win the war this must happen again. That is, ways and means must be found of combating the U-boats more effectively and also of combating the German bombing plane whose depredations against British shipping during recent months have greatly increased the mounting total of shipping losses. And more shipping must be built, although this would not be so pressing a need if the problem could be solved at source.

How real is the danger which faces Great Britain on the seas is reflected in the latest figures made public by the admiralty. They show that for the week which ended March 3, a total of 148,038 tons of shipping was sent to the bottom. This is seven times greater than the average weekly output of new shipping tonnage produced in American and British yards together last year. The February 23-March 3 losses were more than twice the average losses for the entire war. They begin to approximate the appalling average reached in April 1917.

DURING THE PEAK of the unrestricted submarine campaign in 1917 Germany maintained between 120 and 140 U-boats in active service. How many of these undersea craft she has available today is not certain. Estimates run as high as 600 although that figure is well beyond the bounds of probability. Even if Hitler has been able to build that many submarines it is most unlikely that he has been able to train crews to operate them. However, in waging war on British shipping Hitler has two great advantages not possessed by the Germany of the Kaiser. In the first place, with the whole Atlantic Coast of continental Europe all the way from Narvik to Biarritz in her possession, she has far more bases from which to operate than she had in 1917-1918. Her submarines do not have to range as far as the Kaiser's U-boats. And long-range reconnaissance planes can spot convoys and isolated craft and notify the U-boats where to go to find their quarry. Furthermore, German bombing planes operating against British shipping in the sea lanes west of Ireland can do so with relative impunity except for antiaircraft attacks. With Eire neutral, the distance which British fighter planes must traverse to do battle with these German bombers is too great to make it possible for the British effectively to meet the menace from the air.

IN A VERY real sense the Battle of the Atlantic which has now begun may prove the decisive battle of the war. The Balkans is at most a sideshow. The aerial struggle is one which the Germans failed to win last August and September when they made a mighty effort to knock the R. A. F. out of the skies and failed to do so. Britain's defensive capacity has not diminished in the meantime and her offensive power has grown, as is proved by the far-reaching attacks made by the R. A. F. on Berlin and other German and German-held cities this week.

In the war at sea time is not Britain's incorruptible ally. Given time and the output of British and American naval yards and shipyards will be adequate to offset the losses in merchant tonnage which Great Britain has sustained and is sustaining. But that time can only be secured if, before too long, more effective measures are taken to meet the twin threat of the U-boat and the German bomber. If British shipping losses continue to rise the American program of aiding Britain will become valueless. Then most of our aid would never get to Britain. That is what Hitler is no doubt reckoning on. But by the same token the prime emphasis so far as the United States is concerned must for the moment be on helping Britain win the Battle of the Atlantic.

Connecticut Ave Fashion Promenade

By Jane Driscoll,
The Post Fashion Editor.

Connecticut Avenue's fashion show of the year will set its sartorial seal on spring and Easter styles today. From early afternoon until late night at the Mayflower Hotel, professional models will display the clothes American women like best.

Fashions designed in America, by Americans, and with our own native land for inspiration, will take precedence in the show. Preference will be shown for the inimitable sports and casual clothes that have made America famous. The jacket dress will reign supreme for afternoon wear. Jackets range from the brief bolero type to the casual patch-pocket variety, with the fitted style ranging in between. Dresses with full gathered skirts and plain tops are also popular and give fine opportunity for color play. As for the evening version of dresses, Grecian and sarong drapery are favorites.

This spring will surpass all others as being a suit season to be proud of, Connecticut Avenue merchants predict. Conspicuous for their newness are the suits with dolman sleeves. They are the most recent innovation for soft shoulders. And as for the length of suit coats, those fresh from designing houses are not so extremely long. True, they are longer, but just enough to still be flattering.

Back of the many costumes shown will be a nostalgic yearning for the days of 1890—the era of "Dandyism." It's a natural reverting to the period which initiated "casually feminine" clothes—this being due to women's entrance into the field of sports. (The new pastime of motoring had just been introduced and what a godsend were monstrous veils and long dusters to protect the hat and dress of the open car's fair passenger!)

Dandyism for spring takes shape in waistcoats with suits, frilly jabots and froth under the chin, upstanding collars that make you carry your head high and ruffles of lace jutting out beneath sleeves at the wrist. There are touches of white eyelet embroidery everywhere—at the neck and inset in seams, or securely anchored to tight fitting wrists.

Peplums, tunics and tiers on dinner gowns and afternoon dresses are indispensable. And on dress or suit jackets, one peplum is not enough—there must be two, if possible. Peplums appear surprisingly on fitted coats, too, especially the versions with a waistcoat cut. There are other dandy notes, too, in the dressmaker and "Kitty Foyle" mode coats.

Ruffles in the Regency manner and stripes and plaids also fit into the fashion scene to be revealed today at the Mayflower. In keeping with the 1890 spirit there are rustling plaid taffeta gowns with velvet trim for spring. Diagonal striped blouses appear under brief jacket suits. Cover-up dinner gowns have very feminine high ruffled jabots and ruffled cuffs that extend well over the wrists of very new leg o' mutton sleeves.

In fact, femininity in all the fashions shown will be the thing to watch for. It's a time when men are men and like their women to appear the helpless female. Men revel in being lifted out of the doldrums of daily affairs to that celestial domain in which women seem to belong when they don misty veils and beguiling fripperies.

Most heartening is the fact that feminine touches become most women, including those who have shied away from them in the past. Even a well-known Connecticut photographer admitted that the most plain and conservative woman makes an interesting study when she swathes her chapeau in veiling.

Color adds the genuine spring and Easter note in the costumes to be shown. True to "America the Beautiful" are the patriotic red, white and blue color schemes. Some fashion authorities have tried to overlook this trio as a short-lived fad, but season trends prove they erred. The combination is seen in prints for dresses and evening wear and in subtle arrangements in jacket dresses and two-piece outfits.

Gaining a slight edge on the patriotic colors are the beige and taupe tones. Beiges range all the way from a light sand color to those rich reddish brown tones of Mexican pottery. Beiges are especially well liked because they give the wearer so much leeway to choose bright colored accessories. But patriotic and beige tones are only two of the dominant color schemes. There are as many others as the fancy can dream up, including the new green and purple combination.

That Connecticut Avenue alone would make a complete miniature city is proved by the variety of outfits, accessories and undergarments to be shown. A woman may start with a complete reconditioning of the body if she likes, or she can depend on a foundation garment to do the trick. There are expert beauty salons to coif her hair in the latest twist, and florists to provide her with the newest flower arrangements to take the place of artificial ones for decoration.

LUGGAGE, SHOE AND BAG TRIO—The hat and bag case with the large hanger cases provide luggage for travel in the new roomier way. With it are shown saddle tan calf shoes with brown lizard trim and matching saddle-tan bag.

Gay 90's Influence In Fashion Show

Women Will Find Alluring Decoy In Season's Hats

Hats, as shown in Connecticut Avenue shops, are feminine decoy for the helpless female this spring. They make a women look guileless, gentle and innocent. Teaming with them as inseparable mates are coiffures.

Pompadours will still reign over many a fashionable forehead. Often however, they are disguised as bangs. Most hats have a definite sense of propriety and leave delicate coiffures intact without disturbing them. Especially is this true of the accommodating "half hats" which silhouette the hair and permit pompadours to retain their shape.

There are fedoras for the mannish type, and carefree sailors perched on them. Most numerous with birds, lilacs and pompoms are the little poke bonnets and scoop brims for flattering face frames. Usually sailors take on broad brims and are tipped far back of pompadours. Bretons, too, are a popular stand-by for tailored street suits. And a "must" for at least one hat is a pillbox or a fez shape, bedecked with upstanding flowers.

Veils are almost a necessity for many hats. They cover a wide range from those of net tied under the chin, to the filmy mesh ones draped with utmost care. Putting a veil on a woman's hat is like giving her back her weapons of feminine charm.

Lower Heels Now Approved For Formal Wear

It's the century old cry of women that they hate to part with their comfortable low heeled shoes when they want to step out for an afternoon. They will take heart to know there is a definite trend to the lowered heel for dress-up wear. And yet shoes are cut in flattering designs with toes in or out as to choice, as Connecticut Avenue displays emphasize.

Shoes come in an immense range of fabrics which preserve comfort, and many of them are elasticized. Daytime shoes have the comfort and feel of play shoes. Heels are as low as those on a child's first dress shoe or else are very high. Pumps are more popular than ever and have little dancing school bows on them.

The swing to fripperies in women's clothes calls for simple feminine shoes. Pumps that are trim and tailored in alligator or calf complement spring suits. Square toed pumps with the low peasant type heels have almost become classic. For the dressier pump there are open toes and backs, low cut d'Orsay types and fancy bow trimmings.

Kid, calf and llama leathers take the lead, but gabardine is a close second choice for fabric, along with covert cloth. Gabardine is especially clever when combined with calf.

'Come-Hither' Air Is Emphasized In New Veilings

The demure and the siren agree—there is an inescapable "come hither" air to the new veilings. They appear in maline, tulle, net and lace. They're aquiver with butterflies, hearts, posies, polka dots, beaded borders. Occasionally they're double toned, in pink and navy or chartreuse and black. They're more the sorcerer than ever in a complexion freshening green or flesh.

Veils, however, are here to bewitch, not to bewilder. They are controlled. They billow high above your crownline, mist your floral decor, emphasize the underchin and underbrim trend or tie in a high back bow. A Chinese sailor is circled by upstanding veiling which extends from the eyeline to two inches above the brim. There is an underglass flower look to blowaway nosegays moulded by veiling which passes smack over the top of your head and ties under your chin.

The newest cure for irrepressible veiling provides a slim wire circling the brim which keeps veils away from mouth, hair and eyes and is especially good for those scorchers ahead.

STRAWBERRIES ARE RIPE — Eleanor Forman models this navy dress printed not only with strawberries, but also their blossoms. The ruching at hips simulates a peplum.

LIGHTNING BLACK PATENT—Shoes this spring highlight a new vogue for patent. The black colt patent perforated open back and toe pumps above are appropriate for afternoon or evening with matching oblong patent vanity bag. An adjustable buckle strap is a feature of the pumps.

Dress for Easter Promenade Can Be Worn to Tea

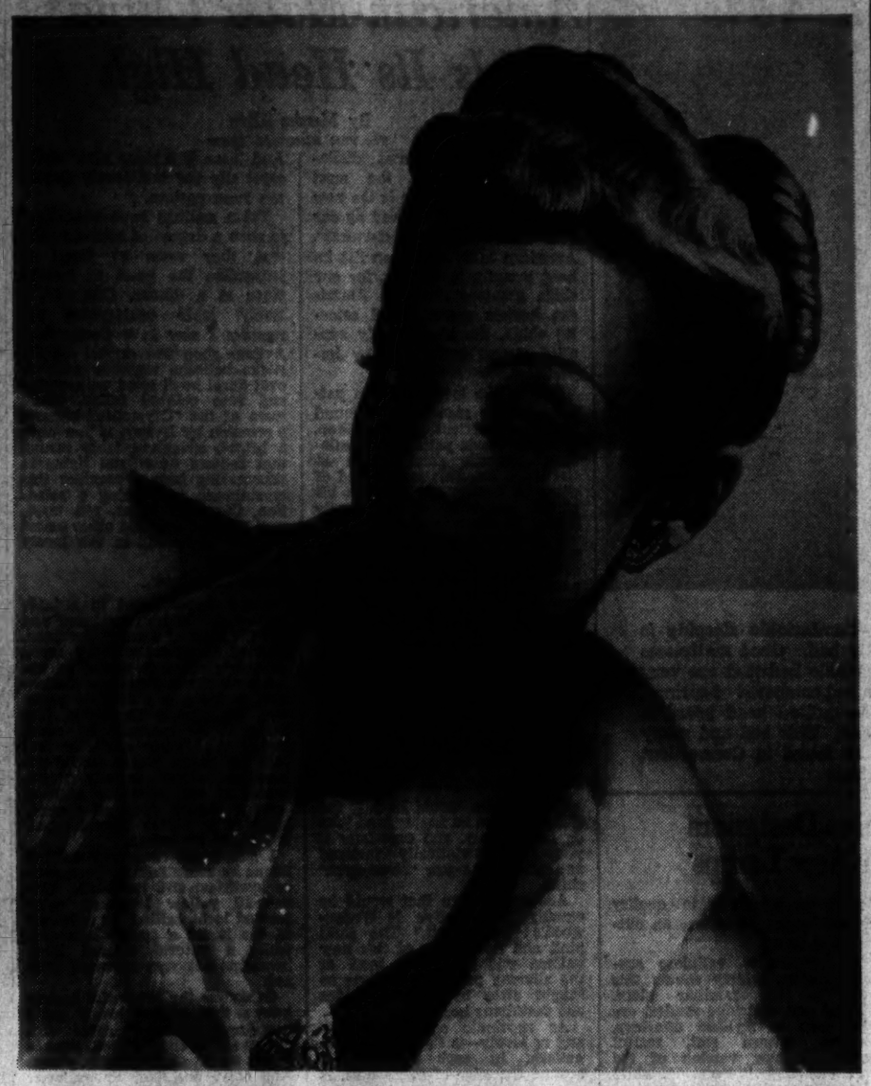
Your dress for the Easter promenade will be definitely high style this spring, say Connecticut Avenue couturiers. Yet it will have the happy versatility of being a dress you will feel perfectly safe to wear to tea.

It's easy to tell if a dress is new by the silhouette it gives the wearer. Look for generous looped peplums and tiers or small double peplums and tunics on the skirt. Taking their cue from the soft shoulders are the new dolman sleeves.

Fresh as a breath of spring are the Regency ruffles for day or evening wear. They're in the form of frilly jabots at the neck and fluffy ruffles at the wrist. Nineteenth century beaux wore them just as you'll see them on women's frothy linen jabot blouses.

Then, too, there is the bolero dress and the harem drape dress for the conservative and figure-conscious women. From sleeveline to hemline, there are plenty of attention getters for those who are interested.

COAT DRESS—A collarless coat of aqua woolen angora, worn by Eleanor Forman, is perfect for casual wear over the beige rayon ribbed fly-front dress.



SLEEK HAIRDRESS—The coiffure of 1941 with its cared-for look is a relief after the careless, frowzy bobs of the past. The coiffure above, rises high from the temples in large shadow waves and is gracefully swirled into a sleek naturalness. It was styled by a Connecticut Avenue hairdresser, and is sure to make a success of any costume—even an old one. Such an arrangement or its modification, can well be used by the woman who has used tinting to restore the natural color.

Beauty Operators Don't Dye Hair, They Just 'Tint' It

By Carolyn Abbott

Gray hair is no sign of age. Many young girls have a sprinkling of gray in their locks. Illness diet deficiency, climate and other things contribute to the changing of the hair color.

Some persons consider that gray hair gives "distinction" but there is something about hair streaked with gray that does not "belong" to the general make-up and complexion of most women. Lovely silver or white hair is another thing entirely.

Matrons too often gray in a muddy way. When attractiveness is at stake, then it is time to consider ways of complementing the hair, complexion and clothing.

Many women ask, "Do you think I should dye my hair?" "Dye" is not the word the hairdressers use for this process, but rather "tinting"—trying to make the hair the same as its original color.

A Connecticut Avenue hairdresser, thinks hair tinting does much to improve the appearance of a woman who is graying because it affords her natural coloring with which to work planning costumes.

"Never, should hair be tinted any darker than its original shade," he said, "It should be tinted before it grays too much. We never try to make the hair red unless the client naturally has reddish hair."

According to this stylist hair tinting material comes in about 20 colors and blending of these tints is possible. The tinting process is not harmful to the scalp or hair. If the client has a bad scalp, eczema or the like, a test is given behind the ear and 48 hour period allowed to elapse before tinting is applied.

Suit Jewelry Is Featured For Spring

The news for spring is suit jewelry—watches on chatelaines; little square boxes bearing the American flag in white enamel with the watch worn face down—all suspended by a bow and red ribbon in enamel concealing the safety catch pin.

Multicolor stones set in two-tone gold and accented by diamonds are used in huge lapel pins which also may be worn with dresses for both day and evening.

Coral gold watches with rose crystals and little deep rose cords for bracelets are now available in a wide price range. Sometimes the cases are decorated with rubies, diamonds, emeralds and sapphires, and frequently the dial is dotted with tiny gems.

There are new gold earrings set with diamonds that are gay and bright, which can be worn for both daytime and evening.

There are many new rings. Flower clusters made of tiny sapphires and diamonds, ruby and diamond and topaz quartz arrangements. These round rings are new looking and very decorative. Earrings are to be had to match, and are fresh and new looking with suits.

Many smart women are matching hats and jewels while bags, gloves and shoes "go together."

Every Hairdo Has Its Complimentary Hat This Season

Every hairdo has complementary headgear this season, due to the close teamwork between milliners and hairdressers. Sally Victor is designing hats for the New York State Hairdressers and Cosmetologists show. Lily Dache invited Charles of the Ritz to exhibit special coiffures with her new collection. Connecticut Avenue shops also carry out the hat and coiffure harmony.

Heart shaped pompadours blend with similarly shaped off-the-face numbers, or with turbans which also take to the double curve. Sleek, side-swirled headdresses fit those exotic Oriental silhouettes. A George Washington forehead roll is made for a tricorne with unpredictable moods. Labelled for this headdress or for the sleek-browed is a pert tricorne beret of white pique.

Many of the medium or large hats in this silhouette are poised on loosely meshed wool or taffeta "face masks" which cover, but do not conceal, the forehead and side hair and tie in back. These were devised to control flighty bangs or give a new look to the bare-browed.

Gibson girl sailors, tipped forward, allow a glimpse of a pouff or of softly curled bangs. Cartwheels with a dip in the center and balanced lifts to the brim, or tipped back with slightly squared sides, frame coiffures. A new version of the deep back which reveals back hairlines is "swallow-tailed." Slim, it often curves to the side and is accented by bows and flowers.

Broomstick Skirts

Broomstick skirts in oldtime cotton prints, such as calico, percale, or gingham, are a new fashion borrowed from the Navajo Indians. The skirts get that way by being twisted tightly on actual broomsticks. They are extremely full and either pleated or gathered to a wide self waistband.

THE ETERNAL FEMININE—Pin tucks and Swiss embroidery give a delicate air to this sheer beige silk dress worn by Gloria Brandt. The hat is of dusty green felt with suede forget-me-nots swathed in a gray veil. The bag is beige felt with green straw trim.

American-Made China Holds Its Head High

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Household Editor

Worthy of the most distinguished guest and the most handsome dining room is the new china now being produced by our own American manufacturers. American table china can lift its head proudly these days, for our china creators give the American hostess graceful and colorful china, the kind usually supplied almost exclusively by importation.

One of the loveliest china patterns I have seen is to be found in a Connecticut Avenue Shop. It is the Gloria pattern of Castleton's domestic china, made at Castleton, Pa. This is the kind of china to inspire one to be a bit of an exhibitionist and invite dinner guests to view it.

The Gloria pattern is completely new in design, yet has the effect of having been inspired by some poet who wanted to eulogize the rose. The service plates are of a lovely turquoise blue, with a delicate gold edging. But the distinction and old-time picturesqueness is effected by the full blown gray roses applied for decoration. A bit of the blue is carried out in combination with the roses on the dinner plates, cream soups, bread and butter plates, and other items in the lovely set.

For the Easter Meal

This pattern would be just the thing to make an Easter meal take on new beauty, and especially if you felt patriotically inclined and wanted to use "home-spun" china.

Another pattern that would be equally as effective is Wedgewood's "Pimpernell." The shell pink and dove gray of this new pattern put it at the head of the alluring pastel decorations so sought after by modern brides and fastidious hostesses.

As rhythmic as a melody—and as lovely—is Castleton's Rose pattern. In each center, and around the edge of every dish, is a nosegay of flowers in pastel shades. This lovely pattern appears in deep pink with tulip, yellow rosebuds and bluebells. The clusters are circled with gold bands while the pearl edge is richly ornamented with gold. And there is a place plate styled especially for this lovely Castleton Rose pattern.

Table settings have progressed to such a degree of attractiveness that they seem at times to jeopardize the guest of honor's place at a dinner. One of the lovely table centerpiece ensembles I saw in a Connecticut Avenue shop was crystal candlesticks bobeche together with an oval floral bowl filled with orchid and rose colored tulips. These were of the "Crystolite" pattern, a creation by Heisey. If you want a bright, sparkling table setting that reflects its crystal lights in shimmering beauty consider this crystalware in making a selection. Cigarette boxes, ash trays, oval relish dishes and other pieces are also to be had in this lovely glassware.

Linen Important

Every appointment in a table setting should be considered and not the least of them is the linen. I noted a two-toned ivory rayon damask cloth that would be appropriate for a dinner of distinction. There was a delicate peach one, too, equally appealing. One thing to be remembered when laying the dinner cloth, is that only the center crease should appear and always exactly in the center of the table top with at least a 15-inch drop all around. Napkins to match should measure about 22 inches.

I also noted some gay colored linens for more informal use, such as breakfast and luncheon. One daffodil yellow luncheon color seemed to be calling for a hostess to use it for a spring luncheon, while a natural colored linen breakfast set was accented with red.

Of course the successful hostess knows that a few lovely table coverings, properly cared for, are more to be desired than a large stock of ordinary pieces. Not only do fine linens wear longer, improving their lustre with continued use, but they also give evidence of the character of one's household. The hostess who is successful is the one who understands the art of combining elegance with restraint.

EASTER SPLENDOR—The table setting above is one arranged by a Connecticut Avenue China Shop appropriate for an Easter dinner. The cut-work linen cloth makes a lovely background for the shell pink and dove gray of Wedgewood's "Pink Pimpernell" china. The china and pink roses in the Hawk's crystal bowl give color accent to the setting. The goblet, champagne and claret glasses are also Hawk's crystal

American Plastics Inspire Designers And Replace Crystal in New Lamps

Plastics and other chemical products are prominent among the American materials inspiring many outstanding lamp designs. A pair of lovely Lucite lamps is on display in a shop on Connecticut Avenue. Around the center cylinder are twined calla lilies in an effective manner.

Another new use of plastics is in molded prisms, "tear drops" and other parts formerly made of crystal. This innovation offers design opportunities in quality crystal lamps, which are an outstanding trend.

In lampshades, cellulose acetate plastics, widely shown this year in the familiar plain, pleated and cartridge shades, are also seen in stylized offerings, veering toward soft, restful colors. A new version of the cartridge shade is two-tone, white alternating with chartreuse.

Shepherd prints and delicate florals in pale pastels, of Dresden type, are prominent among American-made lamps; also clear and colored glass, with brass, in Colonial design.

Linen Accessories This Year Grow More Striking

The new crop of bedspreads, bed linens, bathroom linens and other boudior, bath and dining room accessories, to be seen on Connecticut Avenue is so much more attractive than last year's, that it almost makes one want to toss the present supply out and put these new items "on order."

The most striking of these are the bedspreads made of organdie, eyelet embroidery, chintz, and a number of other interesting materials.

Even if you don't plan to redecorate your bedrooms for spring and the summertime, you can lift their faces. Go browsing through the shops and get some ideas for your tired and worn bedroom decorations. You will be sure to find the correct fillip. You can go completely feminine with swags and flowers or stripes and many other decoration notes.

Antiques Renew Charm of Olden Days

To Americans, the English, French and Italian decoration of the home has an unending interest. In fact, our colonial styles came as a close replica of the English way of life.

The younger sons of well-to-do English families brought to this country ideas of country life similar to the English squire. And the cabinet makers brought to us their interpretation of furniture. Luckily for those persons whose taste runs to colonial furniture, we have available today on Connecticut Avenue handmade reproductions of eighteenth century master designs. Master craftsmen have so deftly reproduced the furniture of original settlers that we can now enjoy in our own homes the charm and beauty of those colonial days.

Because of the antique manufacturers we can duplicate the loveliness of beautiful rooms of Williamsburg. An atmosphere of yesteryear clings to the fine old designs such as the Queen Ann Wing Chair, the "Gentleman's Chair" which is reproduced from an original chair, belonging for many years to the daughter of Jefferson Davis. Colonial card tables, one of the most practical of the console pieces of today, are the same as our ancestors spent many a pleasant hour at games of chance and skill.

Expressive of the culture and tradition of the colonial period are the dining room features offered by antique furniture companies. Although the Hepplewhite banquet table, sideboard and shield-back chairs were designed several centuries ago, yet they make for gracious living for today and tomorrow.

And the pages of history can be turned back when one steps into a Sheraton furnished bed chamber. The furnishings remind us that they were designed in a more leisurely age than ours. Such a restful room is a haven from the tense pace of modern life. The Spool bedroom too is clad in an atmosphere of time-mellowed quaintness, and it is adaptable for guest room, child's room or master bedroom.

As refreshingly elegant today as it was two centuries ago when merchant ships from England first brought it to the American colonies, is the graceful Queen Anne style of furniture. When you step into a bedroom furnished with a Hepplewhite Tester bed, chest and other pieces you catch your breath, for it is all so lovely that you feel as though you had turned back the clock a full 200 years.

Home Economics Unit Hears Army Dietitian

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

A balanced ration, including plenty of fruits and fresh vegetables and second helpings all around, is assured for Uncle Sam's soldiers, Miss Mary I. Barber, food consultant to the Office of Production Management, told members of the Home Economics Women in Business last night. Addressing their dinner meeting at the A. A. U. W. headquarters, she described her work in assisting to plan army menus.

Miss Barber, who has been director of Home Economics for the Kellogg Co. in Battle Creek, Mich., for 17 years, was loaned to the Government at the request of the quartermaster general, coming to Washington January 27. Home Economics women who thought they had big jobs, decided they didn't after learning it was Miss Barber's responsibility to advise on menus for a million men.

On May 1, the entire Army will go on a field ration, she said, which will be as much like a garrison ration as possible. The difference, she explained, is that the garrison ration is purchased by the quartermaster at the post on money credit, up to a certain amount. If he over-expends one week, he has to plan on less the next, so as to balance his budget. The field ration is purchased at central places in large quantities and thereby at a saving in cost and providing better distribution. Although the purchasing may be done in one part of the country, supplies are secured from all sections on bids for delivery to the camps, she said.

Menus are now being prepared for a month ahead by the quartermaster of each corps area. From long experience, it is possible to figure a definite amount per man per day and quantities are purchased to give an abundant amount to each man, said Miss Barber. When they are in the Army, especially when they first go in, they are hungry and second helpings are always in demand. The new men gain in weight the first few weeks, almost without exception, she said.

Miss Barber explained that her work was to make out menus to be used as patterns, with a list of alternates to be substituted if some of the items were not available in different sections. In the Fourth Corps Area, which includes Texas, vegetables not yet available in other sections are now included on the Army menus.

The new plan means that the menus for the messes on each post are standarized, said Miss Barber, but the food provided is as varied from day to day and week to week as in the average home.

License Trouble Shifts Hagner Wedding Plans

That important document, the marriage license, almost snarled up the wedding scheduled for today of Miss Louise Stillwell and Randall H. Hagner. The ceremony was set for this afternoon at 4:30 at the Argentine Embassy, and the bridegroom went down on Tuesday to get his license. That seemed like plenty of time before Friday, for he understood 72 hours were supposed to elapse before the license became legal.

But District law requires the lapse of three full days, not counting the day of application, before the license becomes valid, and so it was that Mr. Hagner discovered that the document wouldn't be good until Saturday. Arguments and pleadings were of no avail, and invitations to several hundred residents and officials had been out since late last month. What to do?. Finally, learning that Maryland requires only 48 hours for a licenses, the couple had the happy thought of getting married in that State. So at the last minute, Grace Church, in nearby Woodside, and not the Embassy, will be the scene of the ceremony.

Only relatives, members of the Argentine Embassy staff and a few friends will be at the church. Others have been invited to the Embassy afterward to drink a toast to the popular young couple.

Munsons Here For Wedding

Out-of-town friends have already arrived for the event. Being welcomed on all sides are Mrs. John M. Gross, of Bethlehem, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Munson, of New York and Chicago. The Munsons lived here one winter several years ago, occupying Miss Frances Sortwell's fascinating little residence on Volta Place, in Georgetown. Mrs. Munson is Miss Stillwell's godmother.

Mrs. Lawrence Tibbett, wife of the famous singer, will be here from New York for the ceremony. Unfortunately Mme. Espil's sister, Mrs. George F. McLaughlin, jr., of Lake Forest, finds she is unable to be present. She is stricken with grippe in Florida, of all places!

Yesterday found the young couple dashing to two large parties in their honor. Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Houghteling and Miss Peggy Houghteling entertained at cocktails for them, and Mrs. Randall Hagner, the bridegroom's mother, and his brother, Alexander Hagner, gave them a dinner at the Sulgrave Club, with others coming in afterward for dancing.

Young People Are Guests

Miss Houghteling chose a frock of sea green crepe with rhinestone ornaments for her party. The Ambassador and Mme. Espil were present as were Mrs. Hagner, Alex Hagner, and about 100 young people. Miss Houghteling came down from her studies at Vassar to be a bridesmaid at the wedding and will return there on Monday for a week more of study before her Easter vacation.

For the dance, Mrs. Hagner chose a gown of light blue crepe. Her sub-debutante daughter, Miss Bella Hagner, was dressed in a gown of similar shade, trimmed with gold embroidery. At dinner the guests were seated at one big table, decorated with spring flowers. Meyer Davis played for dancing afterward. With the exception of the parents of the bride and bridegroom, the guests were all members of the younger set.

Today Mr. Hagner's sister, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, will give a luncheon for the wedding party, climaxing two weeks of almost constant entertaining for the couple

SOCIAL CIRCLING: The John Roosevelts, just back from a Southern cruise, are guests at the White House until tomorrow evening. Lunching in a restaurant yesterday, Mrs. Roosevelt was chic in a mink coat over her frock and a tiny black hat trimmed with velvet ribbons in chartreuse and pastel pink. With her were Miss Belle Johnson, Miss Adelaide Whitehouse and Mrs. Jean de Sibour.

Marion Claussen Will Entertain This Afternoon

Miss Marion Burt Claussen will entertain at a tea this afternoon in her apartment at the Wardman Park. The party will be something of a reunion, for many of the guests are on the public relations committee of the District Chapter of the Red Cross. All were graduated recently from Mrs. Hugh Butler's public speaking course.

Mrs. Butler will pour tea this afternoon. Miss Sibilla Skidelsky also will be among the guests. Miss Stellita Stapleton is chairman of the committee that also includes Mrs. Farnham Blair, Mrs. Leslie Cark Stevens, Miss Martha Belle Moore, Mrs. Austin Chinn, Mrs. Howard McEldowney, Mrs. F. W. Penoyer, jr., Mrs. Alec Preece, Mrs. Alfred Wilson, Mrs. Addison G. Foster, Mrs. C. B. Nickelwalt, Mrs. H. M. McClelland, Mrs. Victor Wallace and Miss Ruth Woodson.

Marjorie Weingart To Be Wed in June

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Marjorie Weingart, daughter of Mrs. E. H. Weingart, of 400 East Fifty-seventh Street, New York City, and Richard I. N. Weingart, of Glen Head, Long Island, to Richard Lawrence Weil, of Montgomery, Ala., son of Mrs. Hugo Freund, of Detroit, and the late Lawrence Weil, of Montgomery.

Miss Weingart attended school in New York and Paris and is now a junior at Skidmore College. She is the granddaughter on the maternal side of Joel Hillman, of Atlantic City, who built the Hotel George V in Paris, in 1928. Her paternal great-grandfather was Samuel Weingart, founder and president of the Weingart School for Boys in New York City.

Mr. Weil is a graduate of Culver Military Academy and of Dartmouth College, class of 1939.

The young couple will be married in June and will make their home in Oklahoma City, Okla.

Bride Selects Wedding Scene

Though she has not yet picked a date for her wedding to John Marshall Kernochan, Miss Adelaide Chatfield-Taylor has selected the place for the ceremony. It will be held in historic Bruden Parish Church in Williamsburg, Va.

Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor inherited a beautiful old home in Yorktown, near Williamsburg, and the family always attended the church in the latter place. It has so many pleasant associations for them that the prospective bride decided on the church as the scene for her wedding. The Taylors sold their Yorktown house two months ago, but as the buyer was an uncle of the bride, he is opening it for a reception after the ceremony. The wedding will take place late this month and will be attended only by relatives and a few intimate friends.

Mr. Kernochan's family has been identified with New York and Tuxedo Park for many years. The prospective bridegroom is an alumnus of St. Mark's School and is a student at Harvard, where he is a member of the Fly Club.

Mrs. McAvoy, who does a column for a national magazine, is visiting Washington with her husband. While here they are stopping at the Mayflower. They will be here until next week.

Prof. and Mrs. Powell arrived yesterday and Mrs. Arnold is hoping they will stay over for the opening, on Monday, of the National Gallery. Mrs. Arnold's sister, Miss Lou-Ella Longan, will leave today after a visit with the Arnolds. She is en route to Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., after a trip to the West Coast.

White flowers, carnations and tulips, were used to decorate the studio. Assisting the hostess were Mrs. John Key, Mrs. Robertson Pickett and Mrs. John Gingrich.

Mrs. Grosvenor Entertains for Mrs. Johnson

Mrs. Nelson Johnson, one of the many "temporary widows" now in Washington, was entertained at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor. Mrs. Johnson's "widowhood" will end in the near future, as she expects to be joined shortly by her husband. He is now winding up his duties as retiring Ambassador to China prior to taking over his new job as envoy to Australia. Mrs. Johnson will accompany him to the new post after he meets her in the United States.

Yesterday's party took place at "Wildacres," the Bethesda home of Dr. Grosvenor, who is President of the National Geographic Society, and Mrs. Grosvenor. The company included Mrs. Ralph William Close, wife of the South African Minister; Mrs. Robert Taft, Mrs. Henry H. Arnold, Mrs. William Crozier, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. William Chapin Huntington, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Mrs. Foster Stearns, Mrs. J. Reed Bradley and Miss Elizabeth Johnson, sister of the Ambassador.

Others were Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Cabot Coville, daughter of Mrs. Grosvenor; Mrs. George Hutchison, whose husband, a Georgraphic official, recently returned from Chile, and Mrs. Adele E. Penfield, mother of James Penfield, who is now Counsul in Greenland and who formerly served in China under Mr. Johnson.

Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor were guests of Ambassador and Mrs. Johnson at the American Embassy in Peking several years ago while on a visit to China. Mrs. Grosvenor has plans for another luncheon on Monday. With her husband, she will leave the end of the month for their place at Coconut Grove, Fla.

Friends Honor Seelen, Leaving Soon for Canada

The Assistant Agricultural Attache of the Netherlands Legation, Joseph J. H. Seelen, was honor guest last night at a dinner given by a group of his friends at the University Club. John W. Connelly was in charge of arrangements for the affair. M. Seelen will leave Washington on Monday on a mission from his government to Ottawa, Canada.

Guests included Representative James W. Mott, of Oregon; Commander Clifford H Swanson, Dr. Pinckney J. Harman, Lieut. Ward Hetfield, U. S. N.; Kenneth MacPherson, James S. Ruby, Littleton Hambley, Bruce Shaffer, James D. Hayes, Cecil J. Wilkinson, George H. Norton, Walter Macomber, Charles O. Chandler, Charles Hammond, Rains Wallace, John Simpson, Bernard Kennedy and Joseph J. Morrison. A recording of the speeches made during the dinner was presented to the guest of honor.

Senora de Munilla Entertains Large Group of Women Guests

Always a pleasant occasion, an "at home" is particularly so when Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, is hostess. Although the Munillas have been here only a few years, they have a wide circle of friends. All are assured of a warm welcome in the spacious apartment at 2400 Sixteenth Street.

Yesterday's party was an all-feminine fete. No cards had been issued, but a steady stream of guests found their way to the flower-filled rooms betwen 4 and 6 o'clock Senora de Munilla wore a smart black frock and a Cuban bolero, completely ruffled. A cluster of gardenias accented the costume and her only other ornament was a diamond cross.

A lovely Chinese bowl, holding deep pink roses, centered the tea table, which was covered with a lace cloth. An excellent Bacardi punch was served, as well as tea. Caviar and cheese were spread on paperthin sandwiches. Thick cakes and tiny cookies further supplemented the table.

Assisting the hostess were Senora de Hasslocher, Senora de Baron, wife of the Cuban Minister-Counselor; Senora de Moscoso wife of the Military Attache of the Bolivian Legation; Mrs. Robert E. Lee, 3d, Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mrs. Trentley Dean and Miss Ana Maria Lacaro, of Venezuela.

Just to mention a few of the women attending the party, there were Senora de Caceres, wife of the Minister of Honduras; Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador; Senora de Fernandez, wife of the Minister of Costa Rica; Senorita Patria Mencia, of the Cuban Embassy; Senora de Berzunza, wife of the Assistant Naval Attache of the Mexican Embassy; Senora de Cordova, wife of the Legal Counselor of the Mexican Embassy, and dozens of others.

Conserve Energy and Eat To Build Up the Body

Tension, Hurry Hurt Efficiency, Bad on Looks

By Ida Jean Kain

THERE are two infallible ways to gain weight—and if you are as thin as a glass of skim milk, perhaps you'd better resort to both. One, of course, is to take more food. But the other—and it may be more important—is to cut down on your energy expenditure.

Stop to think about it, and you'll realize that you scarcely ever see a fat person tearing along. The fat ones usually amble and the thin ones rush. There are exceptions, but I am talking about the rule.

Since slow movements take fewer calories than fast ones, you can save yourself by taking your time. Just cast your eye over the difference in the number of calories you can use in walking: Walk leisurely, say at the rate of two and one-half miles an hour, and you burn only about 1.10 calories per pound of body weight per hour.

Burning Calories

But when you increase your walking rate to three and three-quarters miles an hour, the number of calories per pound per hour are stepped up to 1.80! And if you speed along at the rate of five miles an hour, you burn almost four calories per pound in an hour.

Any given piece of work requires just so many calories per pound per hour, with a calorie variation for the speed at which the work is done. But there is still another angle: The person who rushes from one job to the next may do more work. This sounds like the height of efficiency, but when the extra work is performed at great nervous expense, it is inefficient.

Nobody can do two days' work in one. If you push yourself too hard, you overdraw on your reserve energy and it takes more than normal rest to make you feel fresh and anxious to go. The net result is: You don't work as well the next day. It is more efficient to call a halt before you are overly tired.

Creates Tension.

Probably the worst feature of constant hurrying, however, is the tension it builds up. You know how it is when you rush from one thing to another—your mind races ahead and you drive yourself to keep up with it. This feeling of being pressed for time is almost as fatiguing as the actual work involved. Plan your appointments so that there is plenty of time between. Don't try to get quite so much done—there's always another day.

Gaining weight is a simple procedure—for the easy-going fat person! When you are thin, highly strung and have hurrytitis, it's very hard for you to get the extra calories that mean curves and better insulation for your nerves. Slowing down will help, but you also need special gaining menus. We'll talk about those later. Meantime, here's an easily digested menu that will help you to gain:

Marie Wilson, the film actress, is a shining example of a thin girl who gained weight and improved her health and looks. In fact, this clever comedienne now qualifies as a glamour girl. Learning to take it easy helped her gain

Today's Social Notes

(From The Truthtown Torch)

Sacrifice is the order of the day among local socialities who are observing the Lenten season. Mrs. Thornberry Flitt has given up her projected South American cruise and will only go to Nassau to rest. Mrs. Mike McPace, who had intended going to Sun Valley to ski, has given up this outing and will merely run down to Aiken, S. C., for weekends. Mrs. Mortimer Mannon is giving up champagne and Mrs. Otis Tinfoil the rumba.

Mrs. Leonidas Pelf is serving only two wines (she formerly served five) at her dinners. Mrs. Orlando Turtle has dismissed her chauffeur and is using a taxi to attend even the swankiest parties. Col. D'Arcy Doolittle, art collector, has given up buying any additions to his collections until after Easter.

Mrs. Rufus Rossiter Antelope will substitute small exclusive dinners for her large parties and Mrs. Atterbury Husk has announced she will wear her old platina fox scarf another spring.

"With the world situation as it is, we should learn to do without things," said Mrs. Husk.

Affair of Honor

Word comes from Palm Beach that Philander Plunkette has been challenged to a duel by Count Mercurio, International playboy and lover. Mr. Plunkette, three of whose four former wives are now wintering in Palm Beach, is said to have aroused Count Mercurio's Latin ire when he made a disparaging remark at a dog show about Daisy, a dachshund owned by Mrs. Montmerte Sinbad-Smythe, whom the count has been escorting to Palm Beach social events.

Music Note

Mrs. Leonidas Largo entertained in her box at the musicale last night at Mausoleum Hall. Among her guests were Mme. Mazurka, Count Valse, Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Opus, Mrs. Nettie Nocturne and Prince Pianissimo.

The Payoff

"I've certainly enjoyed this luncheon."

"It was so nice of you to come."

"It was so nice of you to ask me."

"Well, I'd been dying to see you and talk with you. You know we don't see nearly enough of each other."

"No, we really don't."

"But I do think of you so often."

"I think of you, too."

"And of all the things I want to say to you."

"That's just the way with me."

"And I just decided I would call you up so we could get together and have a good talk."

"I'm so glad you did."

"There are really millions of things I want to talk to you about. Suppose we have another cup of coffee."

"All right."

"Simply a million things. But first there's one little thing in particular. It's about Gracie, my niece . . . you know, Bob's daughter."

"Oh, yes."

"Well, anyway, she's decided she wants a career of some kind. She really doesn't know what, but it would have to be something that didn't require any technical training . . . and something that would be interesting . . . and not too hard. Anyway, I was wondering if your husband—he works in such a big firm and knows so many people and everything—well, I was just wondering if he couldn't do something for her?"

Mary Haworth's Mail

During Their Five Years of Marriage, Couple Have Constantly Disputed Wife's Theory That Man Should Telephone if Delayed Coming Home

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I,—married five years,—have had serious disagreements over a simple question. Now, we have decided to put that question to you and thereafter abide by your decision. My husband is a "good husband," but both of us are stubborn. We really love each other and he never "runs around" or causes me any worry,—except for this one disputed point.

Do you think a man, when due (or expected) home at a certain hour, should telephone his wife if he suddenly decides to visit a friend or otherwise makes a change of plan which will cause him to be an hour or more late? Especially if it is after 10 o'clock at night? That is our problem. I say he should call me as a matter of courtesy, because I worry. He says it's nonsense. He further states, "just because I am married, I will not become a clock-puncher at home."

During four years of the five we have been married, he has been going to night school. And he has recently started again. In intervals when he hasn't been going to school, we don't have this problem, as we are usually together of evenings. But now that he is going out alone, our old dissension is popping up again. Our baby is now 3 and gets very upset if either one of us shows irritation toward the other. So please straighten us out. Sincerely,

MRS. I. W. A.

Wife's Theory Is Sound; Her Attitude Tactless

DEAR MRS. I. W. A.: After five years' marriage, you should be sufficiently acquainted with your husband's habit of dawdling on the way home not to be worried about his safety, in instances where he is an hour or more delayed getting home after 10 p. m. Therefore, I conclude that your insistence that he should telephone his change of plans, in order to keep you from worrying, is more of a "talking point" than a statement of literal truth. Actually, you are suffering from a cumulative load of annoyance, which began with typical (shall we say?) "bride's worry," and gradually developed into chronically "hurt feelings"—when he stubbornly refused to comply with your request to "let you know" when he suddenly decides to "take his time" getting home.

However, in giving this interpretation of your emotional reaction to the long-standing dispute, I am certainly not offering any defense of your husband's behavior or excuses. In my opinion, his attitude is, and his conduct has been, indefensible and inexcusable—when measured by standards of either "good manners" or affectionate consideration for one's nearest and dearest. I daresay in the beginning he "meant no harm," that he neglected to call you out of sheer thoughtlessness. But when you charged him with negligence, he got his back up, as the saying goes, and began trying to justify his conduct.

Then, no doubt, as you continued to scold and exhort him on the point, he started wondering if, perchance, you were of a mind to "ride herd" on him. And after that, of course, he began reading all sorts of heavy issues and implications having to do with "man's freedom" and "woman's possessiveness," into the constantly rehashed dispute. He felt he couldn't yield to your insistence without seeming to "come under your thumb" entirely. In these five years, he has been putting up what he construes to be a "last stand" against your supposed desire to check on his every move.

As you have admitted—and as the long-standing, unsolved argument proves—both of you are more stubborn than sympathetically attuned to each other's viewpoint. Were you less positive in your convictions concerning your "due," you would have philosophically adapted to your "good husband's" one lamentable fault of neglecting to tell you when he plans to make a detour on the way home. Or you would have had the tact to meet him at the door with exclamations of joy at his safe return, rather than of pained reproaches for his unreported delay—whereupon he probably would have "thought it up himself" to tell you the next time he was going to be late. And then you would have praised him for being the most considerate husband on the face of the globe, and he would have hailed himself the most fortunate of men to have you for a wife—and so on and so on.

But in conclusion, I repeat that your husband is red-handedly in the wrong in failing—and, indeed, stubbornly refusing—to "let you know" when he's going to be late. Most good husbands instinctively show their respective wives such consideration. In the organization for which I work, for instance, one constantly catches fragments of telephone conversation from thoughtful husbands to waiting wives, to such effect as, "I'm going to be a little late, dear—" or "I'll be home around 9—" or, even, "I'll be about 15 minutes late!" And I have observed that such consideration seems to pay extraordinary dividends of happiness to the couples who employ it—if one may judge from the contentment written on their countenances, and the poise and exemplary competence of their social performances generally. M. H.

Learn Shorthand at Home

THE MEANS to many a girl's independence—the stenographer's notebook! The work is steady, the pay good and often a stenographer's post gives you a start in a business in which you'd like a real career.

You can easily teach yourself shorthand in your spare time. Then when you can say that you know how to take dictation, how much happier the task of job-hunting! No waiting hours for an interview only to be told, "Sorry, we have no jobs for unskilled workers!"

Pitman shorthand, you learn, is based on the sounds of words, not on their spelling. Instead of writing out a word letter by letter, you just write brief symbols for the way it sounds. "Quoting" is a curved line plus a short stroke. "Price" is a curleycue with a tiny "r" above.

There aren't many sounds in the language so you won't have any trouble learning all the symbols. Set aside a little time each day for practice and have a friend dictate to you so you'll get used to associating sounds and symbols.

Before long you'll be taking real office-speed dictation. And on the job how grateful you'll be for the Pitman phrase forms. For phrases you you often, like "we have" and "your reply," you have special extra-brief symbols.

Join the ranks of the skilled workers for whom there is always a demand! Our 40-page booklet, "Pitman Shorthand Self-Taught," teaches you the Pitman system in easy step-by-step lessons. Includes word signs, phrase forms and exercises to help you write accurate and speedy shorthand.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, "Pitman Shorthand Self-Taught," to The New York Office of The Washington Post Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Jefferson Designed Many Gadgets For Convenience

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

We blush for all we don't know about Thomas Jefferson politically, but we've always been too busy prying into his private life to have much time left for his public career. A remarkably versatile gentleman was he, designing his handsome home, Monticello, and inventing innumerable built-in gadgets for convenience in days when convenience was almost the last thing most people were much concerned about.

The house itself took 30 years to finish because Jefferons changed the plans so many times. When he brought his bride home, only a one-room lodge was completed . . . the honeymooning couple arrived in a fierce snow storm . . . riding double on a horse, their carriage having broken down. Eventually the house with its classic design and 35 rooms was completed with entrances on all four sides and a superb outlook. Among the arresting details of the place as Jefferson planned it were the underground passage, the big two-faced clock over the entrance visible from both inside and out and connected with a weathervane so it could tell the weather as well as the time, a dumb waiter concealed in the dining room paneling, beds built into alcoves as in Holland and one bed in a passage to draw up to the ceiling by day, and an ingeniously contrived plumbing idea.

Hospitality was on a lavish scale in the heydays of Monticello, as, indeed, it was at most of the fine Virginia estates. When his daughter was hostess for him there, she once remarked that she'd had as many as 50 over-night guests at a time. No wonder Jefferson died a poor man!

Match Bathroom Curtains and Towels

Give your bathroom windows a new spring dress with tie-back curtains made of the same towels you hang on the racks. This not only gives a smartly ensembled look but has the advantage of an easy-to-take economy—towels and curtains all go out in the laundry together.

There are some lovely new towel patterns suitable for this purpose in the stores this spring—and the colors are really beautiful. A "Rose Arbor" design in a textured towel or a "Tulip" pattern in a two-tone bordered towel are both excellent choices. They can be had separately or in complete ensembles of bath towels, hand towels, wash cloths and bath mats.

Here's Menu To Honor St. Patrick

Table Should Wear The Green, Even If You Don't Care For Irish Dishes

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

IT IS time again for shamrocks, Irish hats and harps, for St. Patrick's Day is March 17. If you are a loyal daughter of Old Ireland you will bring the "wearin' of the green" to your dining table, in honor of St. Patrick, who used the tricornered leaf to illustrate Trinity, and for his achievement of driving out single-handed the snakes from Ireland.

Martha Ellyn,

But even if you are not of Irish descent, you will like the spring-like touches that green can bring to your table. The much loved Irish stew, colcannon, shamrock-shaped biscuits and cookies are all food that give a bit of good-hearted shamrockery.

Here is a suggested menu for March 17:

St. Patrick's Day Luncheon

Puree of Spinach Soup
Minted Shamrock Lamb Chops
Parsleyed Potato Balls
Buttered Brocolli
Assorted Relishes
Cloverleaf Rolls Grape Conserve
Pistachio Ice Cream
Colleen Rosettes
Coffee

To make the Minted Shamrock Chops look for all the world like a shamrock—and very pretty, too—place six rib lamb chops in pairs, with the bone sides in each pair facing each other and the rib ends toward the middle. Garnish with fresh mint or watercress.

To broil the lamb chops, set the regulator for broiling, then place the chops so there is a distance of about 3 inches between top of the chops and source of heat, if broiling 2-inch chops, or two inches if chops are one inch thick. If the distance must be less, reduce the temperature accordingly, so that the chops will broil at a moderate temperature. When the tops are browned on one side, season, turn and finish cooking on the other side. A few minutes before the chops are done put a spoonful of mint jelly on each one. Chops cut one inch thick require 12 to 15 minutes for broiling.

Shamrock-shaped biscuits will add a bit of Ireland to the meal, too. These are sometimes called Paddy's Biscuits. Here is a recipe for making them:

Paddy's Biscuits—Sift together 1½ cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¼ teaspoon salt. Cut in 3 tablespoons shortening. Add about 2 tablespoons chopped parsely. Add about 2/3 cup milk, or enough to form a soft dough. Place on floured surface and knead gently for 30 seconds. Roll out to ⅛ inch thickness; cut in shamrock-shaped biscuits, using "club" cutter of bridge set.

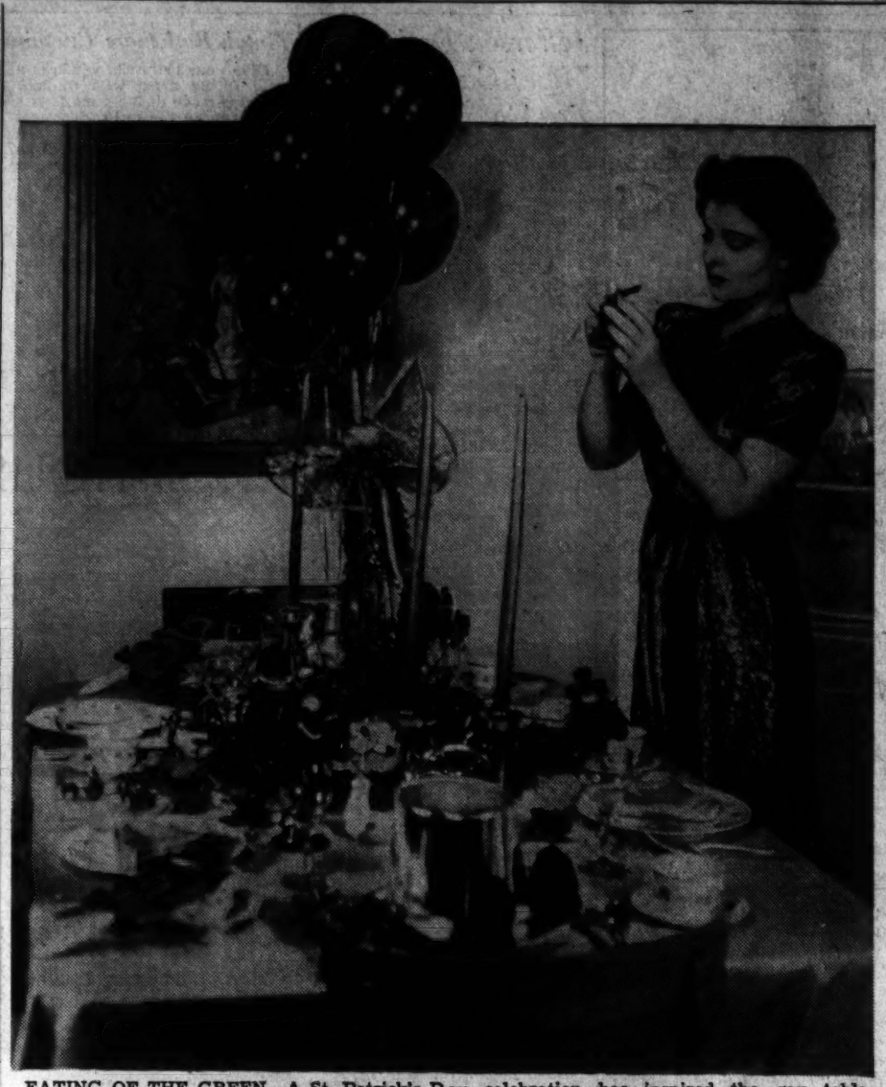
When you reach the dessert planning, you will find there are a number of ice cream specials at your corner drug store. Pistachio ice cream and lime gelatin are both appropriate desserts. Colleen Rosetees will be just the accompaniment to serve with ice cream or gelatin. They are sort of fairy food, crisp and fragile, and dainty as gossamer. But they are easy to make for all that, and here is the recipe:

Colleen Rosettes—Sift together 1 cup flour, ¾ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon sugar. Fold into 2 beaten egg to which has been added 1 cup milk. Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Heat lard for deep-fat frying to 365 degrees. Place rosette iron in the hot fat until heated through. To make each rosette, dip the iron into hot fat, remove excess grease by blotting on paper towel, then dip in the batter, being careful that the top of the batter just reaches the top of the iron. Fry until delicately brown, slip from iron onto absorbent paper. Sprinkle with powdered sugar or green sugar. If you do not have a rosette iron you could make some shamrock-shaped cookies by using your favorite cookie recipe.

Meat Roll with Green Pea Sauce might also be the main course of your dinner. This is a delicious economy dish made of chopped meat, rolled up in a layer of golden brown, all-bran pastry. Over the top pour green pea sauce which you might make a bit greener by adding a few drops of vegetable coloring. And be lavish with the parsley. Here is the recipe for making the Meat Roll with Green Pea Sauce.

Meat Roll-Green Pea Sauce—Soak ½ cup all-bran in ¾ cup buttermilk. Sift 1½ cups flour with 1 teaspoon baking powder, ½ teaspoon soda and 1 teaspoon salt. Cut in ½ cup shortening until mixture is like coarse corn meal. Add soaked all-bran; stir until dough follows fork around bowl. Turn onto floured board; knead lightly; roll or pat into rectangle ¼ inch thick. Combine 3 cups ground cooked meat, ¼ cup tomato catsup and 1 teaspoon salt. Spread in thick layer over dough. Roll like jelly roll; place in baking pan and bake in moderately hot oven, 425 degrees for about 30 minutes. Serve with Green Pea Sauce. Serve 10.

Green Pea Sauce—Make a white sauce using 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour and 1 cup milk. Add 2 tablespoons minced pimento, ½ cup cooked peas, ½ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper.



EATING OF THE GREEN—A St. Patrick's Day celebration has inspired the gay table setting above. Ruth Hussey, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star, used the traditional Irish green as a theme. The place cards are tiny silver hats, and miniature donkeys and carts encircle the harp centerpiece. The shamrock, too, plays an important role in the decorative scheme

Menus Offered For Cook Busy With Cleaning

HOUSECLEANING takes the spotlight this month, or at least very soon, and a great number of things will claim the attention of the homemaker. That means planning of menus beforehand and proper use of prepared foods to keep meals up to standard.

You will find you get a greater amount of the housecleaning done in a given number of days if you devote one certain period of the day to doing what you can toward all three meals. Use one or two hours of the morning to prepare fresh vegetables for cooking and to do whatever baking is necessary. One thing is sure, you won't want to take much time out for shopping on these busy days—so make certain you have a supply of canned or prepared foods and staples on hand.

Baked Beans an Aid

Oven-baked beans that come in cans ready to serve will prove a great help in keeping hurry-up meals from being "worry-up" meals. You can make such palatable meals that your family will think you have had them bubbling in the oven all afternoon if you merely heat them in the bean pot just before serving time. Or, you can heat the beans atop the stove. Pile them on your prettiest platter and surround them with a quickly prepared meat such as broiled bacon or sausages. Hard rolls from the bakery will taste just right with this food.

Some Suggestions

Here are some suggested quick combinations that should please the entire family:

Oven-baked beans with tomato sauce and pork served with broiled sausages, hard rolls, crab-apple jelly, sweet mixed pickles and sour pickled onions.

Oven-baked beans with molasses sauce and pork (Boston style) served with broiled ham slices, bran muffins, current jelly, cabbage and cucumber pickle salad, fruit for dessert and beverage.

Cream of mushroom soup, oven-baked red kidney beans made into main dish salad. Combine with celery, chopped pickles, diced cheese and diced apples. Chocolate cake and beverage.

Macaroni and Cauliflower casserole is also an easy dish to prepare. Here is the recipe for making it:

Macaroni-Cauliflower Casserole—Wash and separate the flowerets of 1 small head cauliflower. Cook 8 minutes in rapidly boiling salted water. Drain. Brown 1 small can mushrooms in 1 tablespoon butter, then reserve several mushrooms for garnishing. Combine remaining mushrooms with cauliflower; then add, mixing lightly with fork, 1 medium (17 ounces) can cooked macaroni in cream sauce with cheese. Pour into casserole, then arrange remaining mushrooms over top. Bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for 20 minutes. Serves 4.

Peanut Party Pleases Youngster At Juvenile Party

If there is a juvenile birthday coming in your family, give a peanut party, for it will please both the young host or hostess as well as the guests. A peanut hunt is always fun for youthful party-goers. Divide them into three teams, the cat, dog and bird teams. Then let them hunt peanuts, hidden beforehand. When any member of the cat team sees one, he must say "meow" until the leader of his team comes and picks up the peanut. The dog team members must call "bow-wow" and the birds must call "tweet-tweet." No other words may be spoken. The winning side gets a prize.

You can also add a festive note to the refreshment table if you decorate it with little animals and men made of peanuts, with lengths of pipe-stem cleaners for arms and legs. And peanut brittle tapioca cream is a food the children will love. The recipe for making it follows:

Peanut Brittle Tapioca Cream—Mix 1 or 2 egg yolks with ⅓ cup milk in top of double boiler. Add 1/3 cup quick-cooking tapioca, ¾ cup sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt and 3½ cups milk. Place over rapidly boiling water and cook 10 to 12 minutes after water boils again, stirring frequently. Remove from fire. Tapioca will be well distributed throughout, but mixture will be thin. Do not overcook. Beat 1 or 2 egg whites until stiff but not dry. Add ¼ cup sugar gradually, beating with rotary egg beater. Stir hot tapioca gradually into egg white. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, stir in some crushed peanut brittle. Chill.

Doctors Charge Loan to GHA Was Illegal

Lawyers argued the pros and cons of Group Health Association's legality yesterday in District Court, but a second round will be required this morning before Justice James M. Proctor gives his decision.

Presiding over the doctors' trial, Justice Proctor had expected to deliver a prompt ruling on admissability of documents which the defense would present to the jury hearing the antitrust case against the American Medical Association, District Medical Society and 18 individual defendants.

It had to be postponed because defense counsel did not bring into court a detailed written statement explaining exactly what records they wish to present and what they expect them to prove.

The jury was excused until 1:30 p. m. today. This morning William E. Leahy and Seth W. Richardson, representing the defendants, will present their statement, supplementing it with oral arguments. On the other side will be John Henry Lewin and Grant W. Kelleher, who are conducting the Government's antitrust case against organized medicine.

In peliminary arguments yesterday over the records, subpenaed by the defense and which throw light on the $40,000 grant by which the Home Owners Loan Corporation launched Group Health Association, Richardson contended that the advance was an illegal diversion of funds.

"The first illegal act of G. H. A. was to sell $40,000 worth of medical service to the Government," said Richardson. "If the G. H. A. is practicing medicine illegally, haven't we the right to say to our members, 'Stay away from it?'"

To which Lewin replied:

"The only issue before this jury is this—did they (the organized doctors) or didn't they intend to destroy competition? If they did, the Sherman Act takes hold and that's the end of it."

It appeared yesterday that, regardless of the court's ruling, the medical trial will continue the remainder of this month. It began on February 5.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer

There's one thing I can figure out as easy as pressing a flower in a book. And that's the fellows who are striking this year are the lads who weren't working last year.

That doesn't make any more sense than fishing in a dry pond. All I know is that's what gummed France up like a boy's candy pocket.

Well, maybe that's the way we do things. Nations are like people and the reason why I smoke, drink and stay out late is so I will have some habits to give up if I get sick.

If we start going the way France went, then I say with Patrick Henry that we are thumbing a ride in a wheel chair.

Strikes put France up Salt Creek with a crosstown transfer.

I may be as silly as an idiot laughing under water, but I do know that a strike in a war industry is as rotten as the apples the pigs get.

Now, boys, let's get sensible about this. We've had six years of boondoggling, Government employment and alphabetical industry and it's time to go back to work.

Mitchell Fights Jim Crow Rule In High Court

By the Associated Press

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, the only Negro member of Congress, argued before the Supreme Court yesterday that members of his race travelling from one State to another were entitled to railroad accommodations equal to those furnished white persons.

"To deny this," he asserted, "is purely racial prejudice."

Arguing in his own behalf, Mitchell said he had been "forcibly ejected" from a pullman in Arkansas while traveling from Chicago to Hot Springs in 1937, and had been compelled to complete the journey "in a Jim Crow car with second class accommodations."

"Even when a member of our race reaches the highest position in the Government yet attained," he said sarcastically "he still is not entitled to more than second class accommodations in a filthy coach."

Extra Seats Denied Mitchell

Mitchell's suit for equal facilities was dismissed by the Interstate Commerce Commission and by Federal District Court for northern Illinois.

J. Stanley Payne, assistant chief counsel of the Interstate Commission, and Wallace T. Hughes, Chicago attorney for the railroads involved, said the demand by Negroes in Arkansas for Pullman facilities was "virtually nonexistent."

Justices Black, Stone and Frankfurter pointed out in questioning the attorney that there were extra seats on the Pullman which would have been sold to white persons but were denied to Mitchell. When Payne explained that railroads would be subjected to heavy expense if required to provide equal dining car accommodations for negroes, Chief Justice Hughes commented:

"Of course, they could meet that difficulty by admitting colored persons to the dining car."

Fear Loss of Business

"The question then would be," Payne replied, "whether the railroad would have any other customers in the dining car."

He added that there was "a sentiment for segregation" in certain areas of the United States.

Richard E. Westbrooks, Chicago attorney, argued on behalf of Mitchell that "the volume of traffic," he added, "has no bearing on the constitutional rights of citizens."

Mary Lackey's Funeral Today; D. C. Educator

Funeral services for Miss Mary Lackey, who died Wednesday in Columbia Hospital after a brief illness, will take place today at 2 p. m. at her residence, Yorktowne Village, Md., to be followed by private burial.

Miss Lackey was for 23 years principal of the Dennison School, was a pioneer in vocational education and had completed 47 years in the public school system. After being graduated from the old Washington Normal School in 1894 she became an elementary school teacher.

At the Force Elementary School she taught the children of President Theodore Roosevelt and Secretary of War Taft. In 1911 she was promoted to the principalship of the Polk Elementary School and in 1916 headed the old Dennison School on S Street near Thirteenth, now used as a storehouse.

Founder of the Teachers' Hospital Benefit Association, one of the first group hospitalization units in Washington, she was serving as treasurer at the time of her death. She was also a member of the District branch of the National Educational Association and the District of Columbia Vocational Education Association.

She was born in Washington and educated in the public schools here, later taking an A. B. degree in the George Washington University night school after she had started teaching. Miss Lackey was a member of the Eastern Star and of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

She lived with her sister, Miss Esther J. Lackey, also a school teacher until her recent retirement, at 5004 Jamestown Road, Yorktowne Village, Md. Other survivors are her three brothers: George W. Lackey, of Washington; James B. Lackey, of New York City, and Robert M. Lackey, of Cohoes, N. Y.

Blaze at Bethesda

The Bethesda (Md.) Volunteer Fire Department last night responded to a small blaze in the basement of the Kenwood Country Club. Firemen said the fire apparently started from a short circuit in the meter box. Damage was negligible.

Miss Kemper was born in Washington on November 29, 1921, and was an honor student in McKinley Tech High School. She previously had attended the John Burroughs School and Taft Junior High School.

She was affiliated with the Beta Mu Sorority and the Mixed Sorority Club. Miss Kemper lived with her family at 3611 Twentieth Street Northeast.

She leaves her father and mother, Charles E. and Mrs. Irene E. Crews Kemper, and three sisters, Mrs. Harvey Simms, Mrs. Dorothy Brian and Mrs. Mabel Damron, all of Washington.

U. S. Experts Study 5% Tax on Wages

By the Associated Press

Congressional fiscal experts, casting about for new revenue sources to help pay for the $7,000,000,000 British aid program, were reported considering yesterday the possibility of imposing a 5 per cent tax on the weekly pay of most of the Nation's workers.

If such a 5 per cent "earned income" tax, should be levied, that amount would be deducted for the Government each week from the pay envelopes of a large proportion of jobholders. Small wage eraners—possibly those receiving $25 weekly or less—would be exempted.

Although it was emphasized that this proposal was merely in the discussion stage and might never mature, responsible individuals who have been studying the plan said they had received estimates that a 5 per cent levy of this nature would raise $3,500,000,000 yearly.

Board Quotas Ready for 500 More District Selectees

Washington Selective Service headquarters yesterday announced the quota each of the Washington local boards must furnish for a contingent of 500 District recruits who will round out the March call here.

Selection headquarters at the same time declared the first representatives of the Capital's public schools faculty to be drafted is now at Camp Lee, Va., awaiting transfer to Fort Bliss, Tex., where he will serve with the 260th Coast Artillery, District Guard Regiment.

He is Charles William Hart, 26, son of Principal Charles Hart, of Eastern High School, and, until his selection, an English instructor at that institution. A one-time cadet captain at Eastern, Private Hart took A. B. and M. A. degrees at Catholic University and has nearly qualified for a Ph. D. degree in English at Johns Hopkins University.

Meanwhile, the last unit of the District Guard was being processed for induction into Federal service. It is headquarters company of the 372nd Infantry, with Capt. Sylvester F. Blackwell commanding. Guardsmen numbering 123 are now going through induction physical tests at their armory, Twelfth and V Streets Northwest, and are slated for departure for Camp Dix, N. J., Monday.

At the same time, selection headquarters here announced that to date 458 registrants, otherwise classified as 1-A candidates, have been barred from induction because they had criminal records.

The 500 trainees, all of whom are colored, are according to this schedule: March 21, 22 and 24, 62 selectees; March 25, 67; March 26 and 27, 53; March 28, 70, and March 29, 71.

Number of men to be supplied by each board are: No. 1, 5; No. 2, 1; No. 3, 1; No. 4, 1; No. 5, 0; No. 6, 7; No. 7, 13; No. 8, 24; No. 9, 13; No. 10, 32; No. 11, 47; No. 12, 60; No. 13, 20; No. 14, 21; No. 15, 36; No. 16, 14; No. 17, 8; No. 18, 19; No. 19, 62; No. 20, 4; No. 21, 14; No. 22, 13; No. 23, 27; No. 24, 7, and No. 25, 51.

Contract Bridge

Even the experts are not always the ones to choose the best leads, as a woman amateur proved recently in a duplicate game, when she alone found the "killing" opening against an adverse slam contract. The hand is shown in today's box.

Abandoning feminine caution, she passed over a safe if fruitless lead of one of four honors in a six-card suit to open a king from king and one.

"Where did you find that lead?" queried the chagrined declarer who, to make his defeat still more bitter, had been the defender's bridge teacher.

"Why, from you!" was the quick response. "You told me always to lead the top of a doubleton. And I knew we couldn't win any spade tricks."

Note what havoc the club lead caused. With the diamond king in the West hand, there remained no play to make the contract; as the loser in clubs had been established before, a place to discard it could be provided. The lead of the club deuce would have been ineffective, for it would have enabled the declarer to create an end play on West, tossing her in the lead at the right moment with the club king to play away from the diamond king or offer a ruff and a discard.

In this particular case the choice rested not only on the suit chosen but also the card, and perhaps the opener had an inner logic behind her selection despite its defiance of all conventional principles.

The result was an absolute zero for the declarer as all other pairs who bid the slam made it, and even those who stopped at a game had plus scores.

Meade Mud Stymies Aid

A truck of the 104th Ordnance Company sank to its axles in the mud at Fort George G. Meade yesterday, and a soldier was sent to bring boards to use in freeing it.

Shouts from the soldier shortly afterward revealed he was stuck fast on a muddy road with his armful of wood. He dropped that but still was unable to extricate himself.

A detail with shovels dug him out.

Gives Time for Service

Compliance with Uncle Sam's Selective Service law last night cost Darwin M. Rygg, an attendant at St. Elizabeths Hospital, his 17-jewel watch.

While undergoing a physical examination for Army fitness at Providence Hospital, Rygg laid down his coat and vest containing the watch. When he returned the watch was gone.

Navy Pay Roll Won't Reach Peak This Year

The peak of Navy civilian personnel isn't expected to be reached before June, 1942. At that time Personnel Director Charles Piozet estimates there will be 250,000 civilians on the Navy pay roll. In Washington he believes the number will reach 10,000. At the moment, there are approximately 177,000 Navy civilians. In Washington there are 6,200 and new employes are being hired at the rate of 400 a month. However, Congress may spike the department's plan to build up a force of 10,00 here. The House Appropriations Committee yesterday placed a rider on the 1942 Navy appropriations bill which forbids hiring more than 7,500 civilians here without express approval of Congress. Piozet told the committee that number would be reached or exceeded by July 1.

Also added by the committee was a second rider which forbids the department to hire additional employes at salaries of $5,000 or more unless specifically approved by Congress. "The committee fears," the report stated, "there is a disposition to overstaff the administrative offices with personnel for jobs for which appropriate talent already is available among regular civil and naval personnel.

Moreover, the committee apparently killed the plan to set up a civilian police force to replace Marines at Navy yards and shore establishments. The Marines, the committee reported, has done a "magnificent job" and they can be relied upon to continue to do so . . . Also added to the bill was a rider which will compel Navy employes to swear to affidavits that they aren't Communists or Nazis.

The sum recommended for salaries in Washington was $8,363,189, or slightly less than was appropriated last year. However, the Navy expedite bill gave the Navy a free hand in hiring employes for the 1941 and 1942 fiscal years . . . Speaking of the present promotion system, Piozet revealed he had more money for promotions than he could legally use under the highly restrictive plan. Only 460 in-grade promotions have been made in the field and 212 in Washington. Money is available to raise salaries of five times that number but, as Piozet testified, the formula is so restricted the money can't be used.

Agriculture Undersecretary Paul Appleby is telling friends an amusing story of how he bagged a wild turkey last week in Texas without firing a shot. He was riding over King Ranch, the world's largest, when a 25-pound wild turkey flew into his car, broke the windshield, cut several passengers, and dropped dead in his lap.

The Budget Bureau automatic promotion plan yesterday received blessings of the State Department Employes Association. Testifying before the House Civil Service Committee, Rosemary Davenport indicated that the department discriminates against low-paid civil service employes. She said that employes in the foreign service were covered by an automatic promotion plan and civil service employes were given what was left. Only 25 per cent of the department's jobs paying over $3,200, she said, are held by civil service employes promoted from the ranks. The other 75 per cent, Miss Davenport testified, filled with foreign service employes, are experts.

Representative Rogers, of Massachusetts, said a survey revealed that State Department clerks received less than Commerce employes despite the fact that their work was the same. She told Miss Davenport her cause was "very just." The employe group recently impressed the Budget Bureau with its case.

N. P. Alifas, representative of the International Association of Machinists, urged the committee to raise salaries of mechanics in the custodial service and mechanics who are assistants to scientists to $2,200, the salary paid Navy Yard mechanics. The pay scale now ranges from $1,860 to $2,040. Alifas said a mechanic with a family "had to have a magician for a wife to make ends meet in Washington on $1,620." UFWA officials will testify today on the Randolph bill.

People's Lobby has called on TNEC Chairman O'Mahoney to introduce a bill to require Federal employes earning more than $3,000 to register their stocks, bonds and land holdings . . .

Quartet Gives Delightful Concert Here

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents on Thursday night a concert by the Coolidge Quartet (William Kroll, Jack Pepper, Nicolas Moldavan and Victor Gottlieb), Program: Quartet in F major, Op. 135 (Beethoven), Quartet in F minor, Op. 10 (Hindemith), Quartet in G minor, Op. 10 (Debussy.)

One of the most thoroughly delightful chamber music concerts of the waning season was played last night by the Coolidge Quartet in the auditorium of the Library of Congress. Enjoyment was kept keen throughout the allotted time by two perfectly coordinating factors. William Kroll and his associates have never been in a more spirited consentience of interpretation or performed with greater felicity of phrasing, and the program was one that happily combined Beethoven's last quartet by Hindemith in his most folkish manner, and the only quartet by Debussy, who always hoped to write a second, but quite characteristically never got around to it.

BROWN

Beethoven's great F major quartet, which puzzled his contemporaries by breaking more rules about structure than the pedants had laid down, was an impassioned and thoughtful reading. Both the poetry and the spiritual essence of the music were disclosed in a performance marked by clarity of exposition and beauty of tone. Particularly impressive and satisfying was the serene voicing of the contemplative slow movement.

Paul Hindemith is a composer with two profiles which he has alternately turned for the public scrutiny. Viewed from one side he is a practical person, who writes "useful" music, and from the other he appears as a revivalist of the romantic impulse. His F minor quartet, composed when he was 24, is a jocund and buoyant work, melodically attractive and animated by an unflagging humor. The themes have an earthy strength and a capacity for sturdy growth.

Debussy, with the temperament of a dreamer, was always hampered by form because it limited his fanciful flights, and also, perhaps, because his ideas were not the kind that could be logically developed. In his one quartet, the listener feels that the ideas wander inside the formal pattern without filling it. Even his borrowing of the cyclic device from Franck did not result in perfect coherence of the four movements. But the sensuous beauty of the music casts a magic spell that makes one forget the irregularities of the form. In this quartet we possess one of the treasures of musical impressionism.

Veteran Reporters Swap Reminiscences At Gala Banquet

Four years ago, on a similar occasion, President Roosevelt wished Charlie increasing happiness as "you go your debonair way toward the Gay Nineties." Surrounded by his cronies last night, the grand old man appeared happy, debonair and on his way to the 90 mark.

Charlie, who was born in England in 1856, came to the United States when he was 13, sailing on a vessel that took 43 days to cross the Atlantic. He told how he sold papers in Buffalo, how he bought a paper in East Aurora, and how in 1882 he came to Washington as correspondent for the Buffalo Commercial-Advertiser. His first dispatch concerned a prominent Buffalo lawyer who had been admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court. The Commercial-Advertiser refused to pay the 39 cents telegraph toll because the man was a Democrat.

Charlie, who holds a Congressional Press Gallery card dated 1883, told of his service on The Washington Post and other newspapers. He recalled how newspapers folded or were consolidated, and how his own wealth shrunk as a result.

"But I am still here after 59 years," he said proudly.

Maj. J. S. (Sandy) Richardson presided at the birthday party. Harry N. Price recalled stories Charlie had told him about the Presidents he had known, beginning with Chester A. Arthur. James L. Wright, of the Buffalo Evening News, recalled that Charlie, who is his uncle, got him a job on The Post in 1910.

Other speakers were Sartorious Nicholson, Emil Hurja, John O'Donnell, Capt. James P. McGovern, George W. Stimpson, Col. W. H. Stayton, Ralph (Spike) Collins, and John Mead.

3 Captured With 2,500 Lbs. Of Stolen Beef

Three colored men who attempted to elude police with 2,500 pounds of beef which they had stolen from a railroad car, were being held at the Ninth Precinct Station last night.

They were captured when the truck in which they were hauling the meat overturned at Sixteenth and Okie Streets Northwest, pinning one under beef quarters and another in the truck's cab. A third was brought down by a flying tackle.

The men were discovered looting a Pennsylvania Railroad car on a siding near the 1400 block New York Avenue Northeast about 4 a. m. yesterday by E. E. Nicholson, a special officer. They fled in the truck.

Nicholson pursued them in his car and was aided by Scout Car Policemen R. T. White and H. C. Womble who were summoned by a yard employe.

Dr. Crosson Heads Catholic Charities Here

Dr. Henry J. Crosson last night was elected president of Catholic Charities of Washington at the organization's twenty-first annual meeting held in the Willard Hotel.

DR. CROSSON

The organization reported help was given by its family division to 1,238 families, while its children's division cared for 415 children. The total cost of this service, according to Adam Weschler, treasurer, was $72,088.40, an increase of $6,286.79 over the expenditure of last year.

George Cleary, president of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, said his society had aided 1,352 needy families at a cost of $46,754. Mrs. Frank Schwoerer, president of the Ladies of Charity, reported the expenditure of $7,341.11 in giving help to 332 families.

The report of the milk fund committee was outlined by Mrs. George O'Connor, president, who said that $4,158.40 was expended for milk for undernourished children.

Msgr. John O'Grady, who delivered the principal address, discussed the Catholic social work program in relation to national defense. Bishop John M. McNamara presided.

Other officers elected last night are George H. O'Connor, first vice president; John Saul, second vice president; James E. Colliflower, third vice president; Caesar L. Aiello, secretary; Adam Weschler, treasurer.

Board of directors are Dr. Ernest Aschenbach, Frederick E. Altemus, Henry J. Auth, George I. Borger, Francis X. Callahan, Michael F. Calnan, the Rev. J. K. Cartwright, Eugene A. Clark, George J. 7 G. W. Girls Have Measles; 15 New Cases Reported

Seven George Washington University coeds are recovering from measles, having been quarantined to their dormitory rooms, as 15 new cases in the city were reported to the Health Department yesterday, bringing the total for the year to 366.

The girls had mild cases of the disease, which has reached the "mild epidemic" stage, it was stated. A large group of girls in the dormitory were exposed to the disease but were not infected.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland explained this is a "measles year," but that the number of cases had not reached the number of the 1939 record.

The body of Walter A. Shelton, 28, of Forrestville, Md., who was drowned with his son, two other boys and a man New Year's Day in the Potomac River above Little Falls, was recovered near Key Bridge yesterday.

The body was discovered floating near the District shore off Dempsey's Boathouse by Logan Cline, of 3914 K Street Northwest. Harbor police took the body to the Morgue, where it was identified by Shelton's brother-in-law, Randolph Mitchell, of Silver Hill, Md.

The body of Shelton's son, Jimmy, 6, was recovered February 17.

Those still missing are James O. Oliver, 29, and his son, Dwan, 7, of Brookmont, Md., and Charles M. Mouser, 7, a neighbor of the Olivers.

Senate Unit Approves Overton Plan

Formula Expected To Get Backing Of Full Committee Next Week

The Senate subcommittee on District fiscal affairs yesterday gave swift approval to the Overton formula for increasing the Federal Government's lump sum payment to the District from $6,000,000 to approximately $9,000,000. The plan is expected to receive the backing of the full District Committee next week.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said last night he is "100 per cent in favor of the Overton formula" which he called "an equitable basis for determining the Federal Government's share of the cost of District Government."

The plan would fix the annual Federal contribution to the District budget in accordance with the ratio of Government-owned land here to the total area of the District.

Reynolds said he was not aware of any opposition to the formula on the Senate District Committee and would call a committee meeting as soon as Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, chairman of the fiscal affairs group and author of the bill, was ready to present his report.

Overton said last night he expected to ask for consideration of the plan by the full committee early next week.

The fiscal affairs subcommittee gave unanimous approval to the bill in an executive session lasting less than an hour.

Legislation embodying the same formula for fixing the Federal share of the expenses of the city's government has been introduced in the House by Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee on District fiscal affairs.

The Senate in 1938 approved the Overton formula as an amendment to the tax bill of that year, but the plan was rejected by the House conferees.

American U. Park Citizens May Win PUC Hearing

Possibility that the American University Park Citizens Association may obtain its long-sought public hearing on extension of bus service before the Public Utilities Commission was voiced last night at the organization's meeting by Dr. Charles R. Ryland, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission.

Ryland, who is also chairman of the association's utilities committee, said discussion with other Public Utilities Commission members led him to believe the hearing could be obtained.

The association contends that better bus service could be had by having all buses in that vicinity continue on to the Fessenden Street terminal instead of every alternate bus turning back to town at Ward Circle. Both the Public Utilities Commission and Capital Transit Co. have refused association requests.

Congress Heights

The association indorsed the movement for a crosstown bus.

Dean Doyle's Son Graduates Today As Naval Ensign

Henry Grattan Doyle, jr., son of Dean Doyle of George Washington University and Mrs. Doyle, president of the District Board of Education, will be graduated today as an ensign from the Naval Reserve Training School at Evanston, Ill.

Young Doyle, who finished at Harvard last June, enrolled in the special naval course in October, and after a month's cruise, entered the training school for three months' drill.

Following his graduation today and appointment as a Naval Reserve ensign, Doyle and about 600 others will go into active duty. Mrs. Doyle will be in Evanston today to attend the exercises.

D. C. Chemical Society Honors Dr. Brickwedde for Research

HIGHEST AWARD—Dr. Ferdinand G. Brickwedde (left) last night received the William Francis Hillebrand Award, the highest honor of the Chemical Society of Washington. Dr. H. L. J. Haller (right), president of the society, made the presentation

A 38-year-old scientist with the face of a high school senior who has spent ten years investigating the properties of matter at temperatures 400 degrees below zero, last night received the highest honor of the Chemical Society of Washington.

Apple-cheeked Dr. Ferdinand G. Brickwedde, 4980 Quebec Street Northwest, told the society at a banquet at the Cosmos Club that the honor rightfully belongs to his co-workers at the Bureau of Standards.

Dr. Brickwedde, head of the low-temperature laboratory at the Bureau, received from Dr. H. L. J. Haller, Department of Agriculture chemist and president of the society, the annual William Francis Hillebrand award.

The award which has no intrinsic value except that it includes a set of books, commemorates the pioneer research performed by Dr. Brickwedde in separating and determining the properties of heavy hydrogen. The late Dr. Hillebrand was the first chief chemist of the bureau. He died in 1925.

The occasion was marked by an address by one of the Nation's foremost scientists, Dr. Harold G. Urey, of Columbia University, who, observing Dr. Brickwedde's praise of him during his acceptance speech, remarked:

"It is characteristic of Dr. Brickwedde that an an evening when we are all anxious to do him honor he attempts to do honor to another."

Dr. Urey then acknowledged the assistance of Dr. Brickwedde in isolation of the heavy hydrogen molecule, a work for which Dr. Urey received the Nobel Prize. In his investigations, Dr. Urey used material supplied by Dr. Brickwedde whom he knew while both men were at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

Both Dr. Urey and Dr. Brickwedde discussed their work in terms understood best by themselves and their audience which was comprised chiefly of Government scientists. The situation was adequately described by Dr. Urey:

"This is one of those things that, if one understands them, he needs no explanation, but if he doesn't he never can be made to understand in five minutes."

Jury Absolves Motorman In Traffic Death

Deaths this date last year..... 15
Total deaths last year..... 79

Elbridge S. Fallin, 25, of 523 Kennedy Street Northwest, a street car motorman, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday after an inquest into the traffic death of Louis F. Schellhorn, 82, of 2503 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

A retired carpenter, Schellhorn died at Garfield Hospital Tuesday of a fractured skull after he stepped from a loading platform into the path of a street car at Fourteenth and Clifton Streets Northwest. He was the District's seventeenth traffic victim this year.

Witnesses testified that the elderly pedestrian was standing on the platform when the car approached, stepped into its path and was struck before the motorman could stop. The death was classified as "accidental."

House Unit Rejects More Parking Meters in D. C.

The House subcommittee on District traffic yesterday turned down a request from the Commissioners for authority to install on Washington streets additional parking meters, devices characterized by Chairman Schulte (Democrat), Indiana, as a "damned nuisance."

Another committee member, Representative D'Alesandro (Democrat), Maryland, called the bill "a move to put Washington back in the horse and buggy days."

Clinic Urged For North Central Area

Council Hears Civic Leaders, Medical Men Term the Section 'Unhealthiest'

A public health center was urged last night by Government and civic leaders for the North Central section as a means of curbing disease in what was called the city's unhealthiest community.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, of the District Health Department, told the Central Neighborhood Council a health center "offers the greatest opportunity for cutting down communicable disease" in the area.

He emphasized that incidence of disease is exceedingly high in North Central Washington, bounded by the Mall, North Capitol and Sixteenth Streets and Florida Avenue, where the population per acre is the city's densest and the economic level lowest.

The health officer advocated a center that would provide free clinical service, with experienced doctors and nurses as well as sanitation inspectors.

Dr. Robert Eaves, principal of Thomson chool, asserted the high rate of communicable disease had a bad effect on education in the section.

The spread of illness, due partially, he said, to a large transient population, kept school attendance at a low level.

James Ring, of the Alley Dwelling Authority, urged on the council the necessity of its cooperation with such groups at the Washington Housing Association to push housing improvements.

He indorsed the health center project and added that the ADA is actively interested in ridding the section of a slum area.

Dr. Milo F. Christiansen, of the District of Columbia Recreation Department, also spoke at the meeting at the Y. W. C. A. branch, 614 E treet northwest.

Ireland Wants To Keep Neutral, Envoy Tells C. U.

It was a prelude to St. Patrick's Day—"A Night in Ireland"—at Catholic University last night.

The 500 who overflowed MacMahon Hall heard Robert Brennan, the Irish Minister, declare that Eire wants to hold to strict neutrality. The envoy said Frank Aiken, Irish minister of defense, was coming soon to this country to buy defense materials.

Dr. Ignatius Smith, O. P., said that St. Patrick, who "Christianized Ireland without shedding blood," had made of it a "land that was the mecca of saints and scholars."

By the Associated Press

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 13.—John Grodzicki, an unheralded rookie pitcher when he came to camp, stopped the Cleveland Indians in the ninth today with three on and none out, and enabled the St. Louis Cardinals to win an exhibition baseball game, 4 to 2.

This same Grodzicki pitched three hitless innings against the world champion Cincinnati Reds yesterday. Last Friday he did the same thing against the New York Yankees.

Rookie Steve Mesner's home run with one on in the seventh accounted for two of St. Louis' runs.

Havana, March 13 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers rolled o an 11-to-4 victory over the Cuban All-Stars today in the first of a series of exhibition games that will close the National Leaguers' stay in Havana.

Manager Leo Durocher used two complete lineups in dividing the work and afterward split the squad with one-half going to Miami for a week-end series with the New York Giants.

His first string piled up a 10-0 lead today before being relieved at the end of the sixth.

Louisville Errors Win For Yanks, 8 to 2

Bradenton, Fla., March 13 (AP).—The New York Yankees bagged an unsavory victory over the Louisville Colonels today, 8 to 2, scoring seven of their runs through errors by the American Association club.

John Lindell, big righthander up from Kansas City, became the first Yankee hurler to go five innings in an exhibition and also the first to get credit for his second triumph. He allowed both Louisville runs, but two of the five hits the Colonels got off him were scratchy. Lindell also batted in two runs with a triple.

Phil Rizzuto and Gerry Priddy executed three double plays and between them handled 17 fielding chances faultlessly.

Iowa Alumnus Was Favorite Candidate

Leahy's Successor Was Line Coach At Yale and Brown; Starred With Bears

By the Associated Press

Newton, Mass., March 13.—Appointment of Dennis (Denny) Myers, former line coach at Yale and Brown, as Boston College's head football coach was announced tonight by Graduate Manager John P. Curley. He succeeds Frank Leahy, who resigned to go to Notre Dame.

Myers, long regarded as the one outstanding candidate among the 60-odd applicants for the position, was named after the graduate advisory athletic board ended a long series of meetings to pick a coach to carry on after an unbeaten 1940 season.

Played at Iowa

He is 35 years old and a product of the University of Iowa, where he played under Bert Ingwerson from 1927 to 1929. After being graduated, Myers coached a year at Mason City (Iowa) High, and then played professional football for the Chicago Bears.

His first college coaching experience was at West Virginia and from there he moved to Yale, along with Earle (Greasy) Neale.

"We feel we have made a good selection and are happy to have him," Curley said as he announced the appointment. Curley refused to discuss the terms or length of the contract given Myers.

Galligan in Running

Curley added that Boston College officials, who had been deliberating since Leahy obtained the release of himself and his three assistants on February 14 to return to Notre Dame, reduced the list of applicants by slow stages to Myers and Ted Galligan. Galligan, a former Boston College star, coached the freshmen team under both Gil Dobie and Leahy. "Clipper" Smith, frequently mentioned during that interval, was not considered because he has a verbal agreement with Villanova, Curley said.

Myers' entrance into Boston College's football affairs is similar to that made by Leahy back in 1939. He, like Leahy then, is rated as one of the most competent line coaches in the East. He held that position at Yale under "Ducky" Pond from 1934-36 and served with Tuss McLaughry at Brown until the latter took over the Dartmouth head coachship early this year.

Riders, Barons Await Duke Tourney Foes

By Bill Burnett

A Staff Correspondent

Duke Gymnasium, Durham, N. C., March 13.—Given a prophetically brilliant start by a pair of thrilling engagements, the third annual Southern Scholastic Basketball Tournament of Duke University got under way here tonight, and even the most antagonistic expert was unable to count out the same two Washington, D. C., representatives which lost in the first round of last year's tourney.

The first night's opener was thrilling enough, Senior High of Greenville, S. C., beating Roanoke's Jefferson High by a slim 34-32 margin, but the nightcap provided the stunning portion of the bill. In that tangle, Durham High, titlist in the event since its inception three years ago, bowed out to a tiny and unquenchable quintet from John Marshall High, of Richmond, 37-28. The champions, riddled by graduation, were never seriously in the running though they held a 1 point lead for a few seconds in the first half.

Riders, Barons Play

Roosevelt High five, Washington's public school champ, and the Bethesda-Chevy Chase club that had no trouble winning the Montgomery County title of Maryland, were on the scene of hostilities but not scheduled to play until tomorrow morning's final first-round games. Bethesda meets Lafayette High, of Lexington, Ky., at 9:30 a. m. and the Riders play Boys High, of Atlanta, Ga., at 11 a. m.

Beaten by a Harrodsburg, Ky., five in an early morning clash during last year's round, Roosevelt was the District's biggest hope on the strength of its record for the season.

In the Kentucky club the Barons will be meeting the first basketball team bearing the name of Lafayette since the consolidation of several county schools in Lexington recently. Despite that fact, the Generals were runners-up in the State crown race and wound up with a record of 15 games won and three lost.

Boys High Strong

Roosevelt, on the other hand, was mated with a Boys High contingent that annually leads the Peach State's scholastic ranks, this year's effort earning a second-place berth to Savannah High after a season of up and down struggling. High scorer of the Atlantans is Johnnie Doyle, a 5 foot 10 inch forward who managed for a total of 186 points during his team's 14 victories in 19 games this year.

Confident that last year's quick elimination and its sound thrashing by Gonzaga in the recent Washington metropolitan championship could be forgotten, Roosevelt built its hopes for survival of the first round on its stellar pair of basketeers, Hymie Perlo and Frankie Ciango, Post all-metropolitan stars. For both the tourney puts an end to their schoolboy careers, and each may be expected to "put out" to the limit. In addition the Riders cheerfully looked to Charley Howard, their lanky and eagle-eyed center, and the Robertson brothers, Tommy and George.

Bethesda, sparked by no particular star but with the most evenly-distributed talent of any team in the Nation's Capital, depended for success on its ability to stop Lafayette's James Head, a diminutive point-manufacturer of a mere 135 pounds and 5-foot 7 inches.

Most threatening scorer for the Barons will probably be Bobby Cremins, the husky tow-head who does his best work under the basket. Bobby Keene, Dick Poerstel, Al Gaist, Duke Hashagen and Elton McClure will round out the starting five.

Nats to Use 3 Rookie Hurlers Against Cards

Harris to Pitch Masterson, Cunningham And Dean Today at St. Petersburg

By Shirley Povich.

Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 13.—Within the next 24 hours, Bucky Harris will be able to draw some conclusions about his rookie pitchers. He will parade three of them to the mound against the St. Louis Cardinals tomorrow in an exhibition game at St. Petersburg.

The young men Harris has assigned for the three-inning jobs against the Cardinals are Walter Masterson, Sam Cunningham and James (Dopey) Dean, and to say that he will watch their actions intently is putting it mildly. The Nats' manager has a particular rooting interest in all three. He thinks they may be very important to his 1941 ball team.

Harris has not yet seen Dean under fire this spring. It will be the pitching debut of the wackiest character is the Nats' camp. But Harris will be willing to forgive the quaint, fun-loving antics of the 6-foot-3-inch Dean, who is a bit on the eccentric side, if the big fellow shows that he can pitch a little bit.

Dean was in the Nats' training camp last year, but was dismissed before the team broke camp and discharged to the Charlotte Club. Meanwhile, Harris has learned that Dean has come up with a knuckle ball, and tomorrow he has his orders to pitch it. If he has any moderate success against the Cardinals with his new-found knuckler, then Harris will be in a mood to embrace him as a member of the Nats' staff.

In the Nats' camp last year, Dean at first was regarded as a companion rookie with Sid Hudson. Both had come up from the Sanford, Florida State League club, in the same deal. But the gawky Dean failed to show either Hudson's speed or control. He won 13 games at Charlotte last year, however, compiling two six-game winning streaks, and Harris is hopeful that his added year of seasoning has improved him. For tomorrow's game, Dean has asked special permission to pitch his pet knuckle ball and it was cheerfully given by Harris on the theory he had little to lose.

Masterson will be the first pitcher to take the Nats to the mound tomorrow, and in his case Harris is a bit impatient. The fast-balling Masterson came to the Nats' camp tabbed as the rookie deemed most likely to succeed, but in an exhibition game against the Reds last week he had little success. He was both wild and ineffective and Harris is hopeful that tomorrow Masterson will begin to justify some of the Nats' hopes for him.

A peculiar interest attaches to Cunningham who will follow Masterson to the mound for a three-inning turn. This big, red-headed left-hander did an impressive three-

Bruins Win N. L. Hockey Title 3d Time

By International News Service

New York, March 13.—The Boston Bruins tonight won their third consecutive National Hockey League title, becoming the first sextet ever to accomplish such a feat, by scoring an 8 to 3 triumph over the New York Americans.

The Bruins started with a rush in their title-cliching contest. They tallied twice in the opening period while holding the Americans scoreless, then registered once in the middle frame while the New Yorkers crashed through to score twice. In the final period, Boston really put on the heat. The Bruins completely outskated and outsmarted the Americans, scoring five times against the lone goal registered by the humbled New Yorkers.

Bill Hollett led the Bruins' onslaught and Boston's score might have been doubled had not Earl Robertson performed some fancy work in the nets with only meager support from his fellow Americans.

The small crowd of 6,424 saw the Americans put up a good fight during the first two periods and then fall apart in the final stanza. Boston took advantage of the Americans' inept ways and Hollett, Bill Cowly, Milt Schmidt, Art Jackson and Roy Conacher pushed the puck past Robertson.

Red Wings Clinch 3d Place in League

Detroit, March 13 (U.P.).—The Detroit Red Wings tonight clinched third place in the National Hockey League with a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks at Olympia Stadium before 5,952 fans.

A goal by Bill Jennings, rookie forward up from Indianapolis, at 18:46 of the final period, put the Red Wings out of reach of the fourth-position New York Rangers. It was a rebound shot over the prostrate Chicago Goalie Sam Lopresti.

With Shirley Povich

POVICH

"I love it. It gives me a big belt when I get away with a stolen base. It means I've outsmarted a pitcher and a catcher who were trying to make me a dead duck. When I break for second it's like taking a dare. These two guys are challenging me to run.

"I get some fun, too, out of watching how some of those catchers work. They're in there trying to protect themselves so they call for a pitch-out to make their throw easier. When they do nail me after a pitch-out, I get a little satisfaction anyway. They're sort of admitting that they couldn't catch me straight away. But there are a couple of catchers in the American League who never call for pitch-outs when I'm on first, and I know the reason. They're too damn proud to admit they need the advantage of a pitch-out to get me.

"Sometimes, I feel like some of those pitchers owe me something. I feel like they're better pitchers on account of me. There are fellows I used to steal bases on regularly who are now getting tough because they've perfected a better motion to first base. My racket helped theirs.

"I was a better base stealer last year when I got away with 35 bases than I was in 1939 when I stole 51. They only threw me out ten times last season, and they nailed me 17 times in '39. And the pitchers are getting tougher all the time. It's getting so I'm under suspicion every time I get on base and the score is anywhere near close.

"I wouldn't say I was so smart about stealing those bags. I'm going to get everything I can from a pitcher before I make a break, but it's my legs that get me down there. Dozens of old timers have told me that I could steal more bases with fall-away slides but I don't like that theory. I'll stick to blind speed. It gets me down there and sliding straight in the way I do. I don't lose any speed. I'm not bothered, either, about thinking which way to slide.

"That's guess-work anyway, the fall-away slide to either side. You may be sliding right into the man with the ball. Most throws to second on a steal aren't perfect, and the center of the bag may be your best bet. Understand, I don't say you shouldn't fall away when you're trying to beat out a two-bagger. You've got a chance to see where the ball is coming on a throw to second base on that kind of a play, but when you're stealing second, you have no time to look at the throw.

"Some first basemen are funny when they try to keep you on the bag. There's one fellow who takes the throw from the pitcher and never tries to put the ball on me. He's just lazy. Joe Kuhel's the opposite. He always put the ball on me, even when I'm standing on the bag. But the first basemen don't figure at all when you're trying to get a lead. They all play the same.

"I've never seen any young pitcher, yet, who came into the league with a good move to first base. They all have to learn how to hold a runner on. They improve, and we're the guys who make 'em improve—the base stealers. You can't get an inch from guys like Ted Lyons and Red Ruffing. They're the champs at keeping you tied close to that bag. Better add Dutch Leonard to that pair. I haven't had to run against him, but I can see that he makes it tough on my kind of guys.

"What pitcher was the toughest for me to steal a base on last year? That's easy. It was Bob Feller, and the reason is that I only got on base one time against him all season. That was the day I beat out a high bouncer in front of the plate. I'm glad there's only one Feller in the league, or I'd have to steal first base to get on at all.

"I'm going to try to keep stealing bases as long as these legs hold out. The fans expect it of me, and I'm out there trying to make 'em like me and the ball game. That cheering is music to my ears and so far I've been willing to take the boos when I miss. Bucky Harris has been pretty decent with me so far. He lets me use my own judgment when I feel like going down. I've made some mistakes, but he lets me run as long as I don't make too many.

"Stealing those bases doesn't hurt me financially, either. It means something in my contract. I run hard. Sometimes, I'm afraid to get up after stealing a base, because I'm afraid something has happened to my legs. But I've been lucky so far. I'm going to be the first man to know when I can't get down there as fast as I used to, and when that time comes I hope I'll be smart enough to stop running on every chance I get."

Pieces of Haight—

Washington, D. C.

Dear Boss,

Because you have been putting these letters on the sports pages, I think it is only fair that once in a while I should devote a piece of Haight to sports. So I'm going to let the Little Potatoes, starlings, Jake and my relatives have a day off while I mess around with a pot of baseball.

HAIGHT

The summer and fall of 1924 were happy days for Washington's baseball fans. Late June found our Nationals in the thick of the pennant fight. "Just a flash in the pan," said the calloused, but August found the club still hitting on all four. In the dog-eat-dog closing pages of the race the Nats proved their mettle.

Not since the Armistice had Washington seen a celebration like that staged the night of the day the Nats clinched their first American League pennant. Hope long deferred indeed was glorious in reality. Prohibition-time Washingtonians waded around knee-deep in bathtub gin, Maryland rye and Virginia corn, letting loose emotions accumulated in quarter of a century waiting for their baseball ship to come in.

Before dawn the Washington Monument resembled a huge bat, the Capitol dome looked like a baseball hat and Gen. Thomas sat on his fiery steed at Fourteenth Street and Massachusetts Avenue singing, "Take Me Out To The Ball Game."

To make the Washington fans more happy, the Nats went on to win the world's championship from the Giants.

The following season it was the Nats again in the American League. The pennant-winning night lacked some of the zip of the year before, but there was a better than mild celebration.

In the wee hours of the morning, after we had put The Post's sport pages to bed, the sports editor eyed me and asked, "Haight, how would you like to see all the World Series games?"

"I would like to see the games, Sir," I replied, "but it would be unfair to the other boys in the office. I'm not as interested as some of the other fellows. Why not take somebody else."

That's a lie, Boss, and you know it.

What I did say was a "Yes," so loud that it must have stopped the presses.

Well, Boss, as long as the files of our paper are at your finger tips, I'm not going to say that I covered the series. I did little more than carry portable typewriters and sharpen pencils, but I was there—and so was a quiet young man with dark hair and square shoulders.

Being somewhere near the same age, we paired off. He was a baseball player. "Had a hot hand in the minors," he told me, "but the American looks like a mighty tough league." When snow held up the start of the series

20 A. A. U. Bouts Scheduled Tonight at Turner's Arena

Lew Pavone Meets Shreve In Feature

Novices See Action In Seminals; 3 Senior Fights Also Carded

The Washington Amateur Athletic Union's boxing tournament nears its climax at Turner's Arena tonight when 20 exceptionally fine bouts are offered at 8 o'clock.

These bouts originally were postponed from last Friday night because of snow and again from last Monday night due to a conflict with the Eastern Golden Gloves tourney in New York, which involved several local amateurs.

Novices are to box their way into the semifinals and seniors through the quarterfinals and 17 novices and three outstanding senior bouts are on schedule.

In the standout of the three senior events Lewis Pavone, welterweight boxing master of the St. Mary's Club of Alexandria, will be out to avenge a knockout administered him by Alan Shreve, of the Merrick Club, in the Golden Gloves Tournament recently.

Shreve Won Last Bout

Shreve, one of the hardest hitters in local amateur ranks, created something of a sensation by virtue of his knockout of Pavone in their last meeting.

Another St. Mary's product, redheaded Larry Baldwin, will be put to sever test in the 147-pound novice semifinal feature in which he is to box Lloyd Rauschkolb, of the National Training School.

Baldwin scored one of the most impressive victories of the tournament thus far recently when he boxed out an upset of Vernon Todd, of the Prince George Police Club. Rauschkolb admittedly is one of the best looking youngsters to turn out among the local amateurs in years.

McAlwee vs. Hunt

Another fine novice attraction finds Ray McAlwee, courageous, young warrior from the Apollo Athletic Club, paired with Dick Hunt, of the Prince Georges Police Club, in the quarterfinal feature at 126 pounds.

Tickets for tonight's bout are on sale at Turner's Arena and are priced at 55 cents and $1.15. Service men in uniform will be admitted to 55 cents seats upon payment of 25 cents and children under 16 will be admitted for 10 cents.

Oklahoma City, March 13.—Defending Champion Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, slammed his way into the quarter-finals of the men's national indoor tennis tournament tonight, routing Tommy Higgins, of Oklahoma City, former State titleholder, 6—0, 6—3.

Riggs sped through the first set and salted away the first three games of the second before loosening his relentless defense. Then, trailing 1—4, Higgins won two games in a row, breaking Riggs' service for the first time. Riggs then turned on the power and ran out the match.

McNeill Victor

Don McNeill of Oklahoma City, national outdoor champion and second seeded behind Riggs, kept his sweater on as he ousted Stanley Draper, Oklahoma City youngster, 6—1, 6—0.

McNeill meets unseeded Frank McElwee in tomorrow's quarter-finals, and Riggs plays Frank Guernsey of Houston, Tex., seeded No. 8.

Wayne Sabin of Portland, Ore., seeded No. 4, eliminated unseeded Norman Brooks of San Francisco, 6—2, 6—1, to move into the quarterfinals against Jack Kramer of Los Angeles.

The Baseball Front, March 13.—Lefty Gomez is fighting for a place on the New York Yankees, after nearly ten years of being the club's most potent pitching package. But there is none of the grim tenseness about him that usually marks a fellow on the spot. He is still the same gay, comical cuss he was when his fast ball was the alarm of baseball.

Lefty was pitching batting practice yesterday and threw a pitch which Tommy Henrich missed by a good yard. "Yow!" Gomez yelled. "Nobody's missed that one for two years." He had trouble pitching to Phil Rizzuto, the mighty midget who will play shortstop either for the Yankees or Camp Dix this season. "You're a cinch to make good in this league," he told the little Italian. "The pitchers will have to learn how to pitch downhill to you."

Joe McCarthy beckoned to Lefty to lay off work and the lean, good-looking pitcher meandered over to the green wooden clubhouse at St. Pete's Miller Huggins Field. The phone was ringing when he got there and Gomez yelled to the clubhouse boy, "That's Barrow. Tell him I've been working great, that my arm's in good shape, that . . ." The clubhouse boy said "Pipe down, it's the local laundry on the phone." A few minutes later the phone rang again, and Gomez, undressing now, bawled, "No wonder I got a salary cut; Barrow's spending all the money on long distance phone calls. Cut that darn phone off! Every time it rings I wonder if I'm still a Yankee."

We asked him what he thought when it looked as if he would be sent to Brooklyn.

"It sounded pretty good to me," he grinned. "Might've been a nice ride. There was some talk of me being drafted, too. But that's all off. They put me in class Z-1, to match my pitching. But as for going to Brooklyn, I came into New York long after that story broke and went up to see Barrow. I asked him if he had asked waivers on me and he said, 'No.' So I said, 'Fine, I'll sign my contract right now.' I was afraid that when he said 'no,' that he might be beginning a long sentence and that the next word might be 'but.' So I out him off."

Gomez had reeled down to a g-string by now, and he looked in fine condition. "I weighed 202 pounds on Christmas," he said. "Now I'm down to a hundred and sixty some. The last time I was this light I won 26 games, and they told me that I'd make a hell of a pitcher if I put on some weight. So the next year I put on 15 pounds and couldn't get a batter out. Now I'm confused. But, honest, I never felt better. My back's okay now. Fixed it up by lifting weights. And I'm sure I'll be able to take my regular turn in the box. Though I wish I knew what league it was going to be in."

McCarthy came into the undressing room after that and we asked him about his new first baseman, Joe Gordon. "Listen," Joe said, "you can go out on the limb on that fellow. He's played only three games at first base, and he never played first in the minors, but right now there isn't a better first baseman in baseball. He'll get better, too, when he gets the hang of bunt plays and force plays. Gordon's such a great fielder that he'd be good anywhere you put him. I moved him to first because the first baseman gets more chances to field a ball than any other player. And nobody can take care of chances better than Gordon. That's why I didn't move him to third . . . where he'd have only four or five chances a game."

McCarthy definitely is going to start Rizzuto and Jerry Priddy as the Yankee second base combination, which means sending Frank Crosetti to the bench. "You've got to go along with Rizzuto and Priddy, even after seeing them once," McCarthy enthused, and Joe isn't given to enthusiasms. "You've got to find out, and the only way to find out is to play them. But they'll make it. Don't doubt that. And Gordon will more than make it. He can outfield Dahlgren, outstretch him and he makes a better target over there on first for the infielders to throw at."

From McCarthy down, the Yankees' camp at St. Pete simply exudes that quiet confidence which the club had all during its pennant-winning days, and lost only toward the end of last season. The Bronx Bombers mean to win that American League pennant this year and you can bet your Homburg bonnet that they will if Gomez, who could win only three games last year, after averaging 18 wins during the previous nine years with the team, can come back.

Steve Belloise Choice Over Mauriello

New York, March 13.—Steve Belloise is the 2-1 favorite to beat Tami Mauriello tomorrow night in their 10-round neighborhood brawl at Madison Square Garden.

Both young middleweight contenders are from the Bronx and have huge metropolitan followings. Hence the betting is unusually heavy and Promoter Mike Jacobs expects a near-capacity crowd.

Belloise is favored because of his excellent showings in two matches with Champion Ken Overlin, who took both decisions by narrow margins. Mauriello lost but once in 27 bouts. Billy Soose outpointed him in 10 rounds, January 3.

PETWORTH

Eddie Payne was the hero of the Petworth League with highs of 169-417, the game mark coming within two pins of tying Lou Jenkins' record 171. Schaeffer Motors and Wonder Bread split team honors, the first taking game with 665 while the latter rolled the top set of 1,820.

AUTOMOTIVE

It was almost all Arcade Pontiac last night in the Automotive League at the Ice Palace as John Anderson took high game with 164 and Teammate R. Miller upped the old individual set mark by 13 pins, totaling 433, to help chalk up a team set record of 1,791 which added 22 sticks to the old high. R. Miller also had a near-high game of 160.

BANKERS

Dick Light starred in the Bankers League at Arcadia, his game of 155 and 380 set showing the way to his Washington Loan & Trust team so that they captured high team set with a 1,711 count. The Bank of Washington rolled 607 to lead for team game.

GOVERNMENT

Abbie Clarke and Townsend, teammates of the Refuse No. 2 quintet of the D. C. Government League at Brookland Recreation, led the parade with game and set of 162 and 395, respectively, to spark their team to top set of 1,712. Police No. 1 took high game with 611. Sewer won all three from Material and Highway did likewise with Traffic. Sewer leads with Police No. 1 and Refuse No. 1 tied for the runner-up.

CONN. AVENUE

The Connecticut Avenue Ladies League at the Ice Palace found that Zora Corley, Orioles, had top game with a 119 count but was unable to stave off a three-game defeat by the Penguins, who took the team highs with 489 and 1,362. Sis Dent, Blue Birds, was best for individual set, her 318 topping them all.

Manager Dykes Has Well-Balanced Team This Season

By the Associated Press

Pasadena, Calif., March 13.—James Joseph Dykes, the rag-grab man of baseball, may cause some of the big money clubs of the American League more grief this season if his newly acquired talent comes up to expectations, as Chicago White Sox observers predict.

Manager Dykes has a well-balanced pitching staff, headed by Ted Lyons. He has fair catching, a first-class infield, now that the second-base gap has been filled, and a hard-hitting array of outfielders.

The White Sox have their share of question marks, of course, but don't be surprised if they know the answers, and the South Siders wind up in first division next fall. The boys were in their pitching not for a first-division berth but for the championship itself as late as September 15 of the 1940 season.

Dykes believes he has one big worry of last season's team pretty much in hand, namely, second base. Leading candidate for this job is Billy Knickerbocker, a fugitive from the Yankee bench, where he sat, and sat—and collected good money—as understudy to Gordon, Crosetti and Rolfe. The 29-year-old Whittier, Calif., man, not unhappy over severance of connections with New York, was delighted to fall a regular playing assignment with the Sox.

Knickerbocker, once with Cleveland and the Browns, has to beat off challengers from Don Kolloway from the Oklahoma City club, and Skeeter Webb, who would rather play shortstop but won't, as long as Luke Appling continues his brilliant career.

Big Joe Kuhel will be back on first and probably will continue his good hitting. His average last year was .280, but he drove in 90-odd runs to lead the club. Bob Kennedy will resume at third, provided Dario Lodigiani, from Toronto via the Philadelphia Mackmen, doesn't take over.

The outfield will be composed of Flyhawk Mike Kreevich, who suffered a batting slump last year, and the .300 sluggers Julius Solters and Taft Wright.

Larry Rosenthal will be on hand for utility service. Thurman Tucker and Dave Short, both from the Oklahoma City farm, also are outfield candidates.

The regular catcher will be Mike Tresh. Tommy Turner, an alumnus from Houston, and George Dickey, from Oklahoma City, one of the famous Dickey family, round out the backstopping corps.

Pitching? What would Dykes do if he had just one certain 20-game winner? Or even an 18-game artist? Or Ted Lyons 10 years ago? At that, Lyons will take his usual once a week turn, and probably will post 12 or more games on the win side.

Eddie Smith, Johnny Rigney—provided Uncle Sam doesn't get him—Thornton Lee and Bill Dietrich complete the regular starters. Dykes believes that Johnny Humphries, from Virginia and the "forgotten man" of the Cleveland Indians for three years, may prove a prized acquisition. Newcomers Orval Grove, Jess Dobernic and Jack Hallett are seeking a berth; Pete Appleton remains as the No. 1 relief hurler in place of Clint Brown, traded for Humphries, and Joe Haynes may be kept or sent back to Washington, depending on his sore arm troubles.

There's one more man on the active list, the eighth infielder. His name is James Joseph Dykes, whom the press box boys say can still perform, even if he does have to leave the park after a game in an ambulance.

Maeda Cracks Tropical Park Record in Taking Feature

Sensational McCreary Rides Triple

Maemere's Horse Runs Mile, 70 Yards In 1:41 3-5; Royal Man Second

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 13.—Another track record toppled at this lightning fast race track this afternoon when Maeda, representing Mrs. Dewitt Page's Maemere Farm, covered a mile and 70 yards in 1:41 3-5 under the redoubtable Conn McCreary. Devil's Crag, the gelding that created the former mark of 1:41 4-5 earlier this month, did not run within pounds of that performance in today's headliner. He brought up the rear, running far back almost from the start.

Maeda, second winner of three for McCreary, beat the Tower Stable's Royal Man, which ruled favorite in the seven-horse field, by a head. Ringie, from Gustave Ring's barn, finished three lengths behind. That Maeda won was due, in no small measure, to McCreary. The "pocket Hercules" got the most out of his mount, as is his habit on a horse. Maeda returned $16.20 for $2 and carried 116 pounds.

McCreary earned his triple in the sixth race on Air Post, which took all the worst of it and won by 1½ lengths to pay the talent $6.90 for $2. Llanero was second, another 1½ lengths better than Dandy Fox.

Air Post, which had won her previous race running for $1,500, ran for twice that amount in today's test for platers. She twice got loose from McCreary at the post. When the start came the filly broke fast, but soon fell back until she was next to last. Closing gamely, the daughter of Ariel overtook Llanero and won going away.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALNED, $11.60, $3.30, $2.80; PETTACAIRN, $2.50, $2.30; MILL TOWER, $3.00.

ALNED, rated off the pace the first half mile, improved his position gradually the remainder of the trip on the outside and wore PETTACAIRN down in the final 20 yards. PETTACAIRN outbroke the field, showed the most speed, dropped back at the furlong pole, but came again and took command. He then faltered. MILL TOWER moved up fast and went into the lead at the furlong pole, but hung when it came to a drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:34. Off at 3:34. Winner, Mrs. Alice A. Phillips' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAELINE, $8.50, $4.10, $3.30; SYL'S BETTY, $4.70, $3.50; LITTLE BOLO, $6.10.

MAELINE, kept in nearest pursuit of the leader from the start, continued determinedly through the stretch and outlasted SYL'S BETTY in the final drive. SYL'S BETTY, under pressure and on the outside through, made a game effort and was wearing the winner down. LITTLE BOLO, saving ground, finished stoutly under punishment, yet could not overhaul the leaders.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,200. For 4-year-olds and upward; allowances. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:02½. MAEDA, running in his best form, was rushed to the front, then rated cleverly in front and had something left when challenged and just lasted. ROYAL MAN, eased off the pace entering the backstretch, followed the pace closely, made a great bid, but could not get up. RINGIE, well up on the inside all the way, shook off the others in the last furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:33. Winner, T. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AIR POST, $6.90, $3.30, $2.80; LLANERO, $4.00, $2.80; DANDY FOX, $4.10.

AIR POST, rated off the pace rounding the first turn, moved up with determination on the inside of the leaders in the last 3 furlongs, took command through the stretch and won going away. LLANERO, eased off the early pace, responded to urging leaving the backstretch, drew clear and saved ground, but then was unable to withstand the winner's bid. DANDY FOX, slow to begin, made a bold bid on the stretch turn, but hung in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:01. BRIGHT REBEL, reserved off the pace until leaving the backstretch, moved up gradually on the outside and, closing gamely to punishment, wore the leaders down through the stretch. FLYING SILVER, well up all the way, made a game effort through the stretch, but could not withstand the winner's bid. BROWN BOMB, on the outside most of the trip, continued with good courage in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 4-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:31. Winner, V. L. Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

The astounding total of monies won by the stable of Charles S. Howard during the past seven seasons at Santa Anita Park is evidenced by the fact that, during this time, the red and white triangle silks of the San Francisco sportsman have accounted for the sum of $518,930. This is a record that has seldom, if ever, been equaled by any one stable at any one race track during a seven-year period. More than that, $507,955 was won during the past five seasons at Santa Anita by Howard, since during the earlier years of 1935 and 1936, he had but a few horses of the plater class. During this last season of 1941 Howard won $174,835. This, it is believed, is an all-time record for one stable at one meeting. This includes victories in seven of the 15 stakes and handicaps offered by the Los Angeles Turf Club this year. Largest single money-winner for the Howards this season is Mioland, who accounted for four stakes. In the last five runnings of the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, Howard has had no less than two first and four seconds, and has gathered in a total from this race alone of $257,750. Kayak II won the race in 1939, and Seabiscuit in 1940. Seabiscuit was second in 1937 and 1938, Kayak II was second to Seabiscuit in 1940, and Mioland was beaten a neck for all the money this year. A large portion of Howard's great success at Santa Anita has, of course, been due to four horses, Seabiscuit, Kayak II, Mioland, and Porter's Cap.

1939-40	141,450
1938-39	120,600
1937-38	33,750
1936-37	37,320
1935-36	6,150
1934-35	2,825
	$516,930

Received a card from the American Legion saying that the Veterans Club is putting on an oyster roast Sunday afternoon at the Potomac Boat Club. They inclosed a menu. I could really use a meal like that about midway of the Pimlico meeting.

BILL.

First race—ALCINOUS gets the best figure in this open race for 3-year-olds and promises to do a lot of running despite high weight. PAJAS gets in light and is dangerous. EMBRACE may fill out the money circle.

Second race—GOLD MESH with the "hot" riding Ryan aboard could be the right one in this field of veteran sprinters. The weight is right and I'm going to string along. ANNIE ALONE is far down the list but her recent race was so good she cannot be passed up. TRYONE for the show end.

Third race—BATTLE WON has all the earmarks of a winner in this group of 3-year-olds. Likes the route and is fit enough to operate with 118 pounds. BLUMERE belongs close with this brand of opposition. FOXWORTH has worked kindly and will be a factor.

Fourth race—FATE may prove the best of the juvenile fillies gathered for this half-mile test. Seabo will have charge of the saddle work. QUICK CONQUEST and VIOLANTE will be there if the top one fails to perform as I anticipate.

Fifth race—HIGHOMAR is the class of this field and will have Wayne Wright for riding purposes. The veteran appears well placed and I believe he can take it all. GREENY is fit and ready. PARI-ERNEST belongs close with these.

Sixth race—MIGHTY MISS is tossed in this with a feather assignment and will do a lot of traveling. Could be the right one. WHITE HOT has been fairly consistent and is dangerous. CHERRY TRIFLE for the show end.

Seventh race—HIGH BLAME likes the mile and a sixteenth of this and gets the company that suits. I'm going to string along. COUNT ELEVEN and SAN ANTIOCA to take care of the place and show awards.

Eighth race—REDROCK CANYON, with McCreary up, gets a good figure in the day's finale and I expect a set of brackets. NOODLES and CALLING appear to have something on the others.

Best bet—Highomar.

Eagles Meet Baltimore Hockey Team in Crucial Test Tonight

Locals Risk League Lead At Riverside

Orioles Make Last Appearance of Ice Season; MacKenzie's Team in Good Shape

The Baltimore Orioles will make their last regularly scheduled 1940-41 appearance at Riverside Stadium tonight at 8:30 o'clock when they meet the Washington Eagles in a crucial Eastern Hockey League game.

The fan-owned Orioles will be set for a do-or-die effort tonight. The Eagles currently are leading the Orioles by only a single point in the Eastern League race and a victory for Baltimore tonight would send it out in front by a similar margin.

Coach Bill ("Pick") Hines, head man of the Orioles, yesterday insisted that his is the best money team in the Eastern League and will prove it against Washington.

Coach Gives Reasons

"We'll see who's who when the chips are down," Hines declared, "and my guess is the Orioles. I'm not selling the Eagles short, understand. They have held up splendidly under pressure and have earned the respect of every team in the Eastern League. However, we have the more experienced and better balanced team and this is the time to prove it."

Nor will the pressure be off after tonight's game. Tomorrow night the Eagles proceed to River Vale, N. J., for a game with the Jersey Skeeters and on Sunday night are to play the Orioles in Baltimore.

Goalie Gordon Hemming will be sent into the nets against the Orioles for Washington. Hemming, generally at his best against Baltimore, returned to the line-up last week after a lengthy absence caused by a sinus disorder and has played some outstanding hockey since.

Burns In Shape

The Eagles enter the three-game weekend series physically fit and with their morale bolstered following two comeback victories over Atlantic City and New York. Particularly gratifying to the Eagles at this time is the return to form of high-scoring Norm Burns who scored two goals against the New York Rovers last Tuesday night.

Hal Dewey, Russ Rossignol and Roy McBride, other Eagles who have had more than their share of success against Baltimore in recent games, will be back on the job.

300 to Compete Here In Indoor Track Meet

Washington A. A. Event Draws Many Stars For Competition at Uline Ice Arena

Any number of District and even a few world records may fall at Uline's Arena tomorrow afternoon and night when a select field of more than 300 entries will compete in the Washington Athletic Association's Indoor Games.

No fewer than seven outstanding athletes who failed to compete in the Catholic University games last Friday night will be numbered among tomorrow night's headliners.

The field events are to start at 8:30 o'clock and the games at 7:30, but the preliminaries will be launched at 3:30 p. m. if necessary.

Kenneth Dills, outstanding pole vaulter from the University of Southern California, reported here yesterday and went into training immediately. Earl Meadows, world champion pole vaulter and Olympic star, was to put in an appearance last night and join the athletes on the ground in their workouts at Uline's today.

Campbell Entered

One spirited bidder for a new world's record will be Fordham University's Jack Campbell, who will be out to clip a fraction off the quarter-mile. Campbell, who admitted a liking for the Uline track last Monday night, has been unofficially clocked at 48 seconds and believes that he can officially beat the world's mark of 49 and a fraction seconds tomorrow.

Joe McCluskey, veteran distance runner of the New York A. C., and Don Lash, the flying State policeman from Indiana, both claim they will beat McCluskey's world mark in the steeplechase. McCluskey beat his old mark in the National A. A. U. games at Madison Square Garden recently.

Meadows, the world champion pole vaulter of the Southern California A. A., who eclipsed his own best mark while setting yet another world's record of 14 feet 7⅛ inches in the Knights of Columbus games last Saturday night, will be bidding for his third record of the indoor season. He will be prodded along by Dick Ganslen, of the Shore A. C. of New Jersey, who defeated Meadows in the University of Maryland—Fifth regiment Armory games in Baltimore last Friday night, and was runner-up to Meadows in his record breaking performance in the Knights of Columbus games less than 24 hours later.

Blozis Aims for Mark

Al Blozis, Georgetown University's shotput champion, also admits an ambition of bettering his world indoor record of 56 feet 2⅛ inches established in the Knights of Columbus Games last Saturday. Blozis admittedly would like nothing better than to set a new world's record before a home town audience.

One of the finest events of the night will be the Washington A. A.'s President's Cup mile, involving world champion George Mehl, John Munski, Tommy Fields and Gene Venzke.

A blazing rivalry will be climaxed in the Washington A. A.'s 1,000-yard run featuring Charley Beetham, former Ohio State wizard running unattached out of Columbus, Ohio, and Jim Kehoe, formerly of the University of Maryland and now of the Washington A. A.

Allan Tomlich, one of the world's greatest hurdlers, also is entered in the meet.

Tickets for tomorrow's meet are on sale at the Young Men's Shop, Fairway Sports Shop, Uline's Arena and the Sport Center and are priced at 75 cents, $1.10 and $1.65.

Flu Hits Chisox Catcher Mike Tresh

Pasadena, Calif., March 13 (AP).—A flu epidemic in the Chicago White Sox camp which already had four athletes in bed caught up with Catcher Mike Tresh today. Even so, Manager Jimmy Dykes expects enough able-bodied performers on hand to carry out tomorrow's scheduled exhibition game with Seattle. More rain today restricted practice to a session of throwing.

Giants' Joe Orengo Hitting Long Ball

Miami, Fla., March 13 (AP).—Joe Orengo, who is determined to hold up his share of the New York Giants' infield burden this year, stood out again today as the club practiced for tomorrow's test against the Phillies.

He slammed two balls over the left-field wall.

Finder of Henry Armstrong Dies

Los Angeles, March 13 (AP).—Boxing Inspector Tom Cox, credited with discovering Fighter Henry Armstrong, died today. He was 55.

Cox, for seven years an agent of the California athletic commission, coached and trained Armstrong when the little St. Louis Negro first came to Los Angeles to learn boxing.

Cox guided him through numerous amateur bouts, then turned him over to Wirt Ross, veteran manager, who later sold Armstrong's contract to Eddie Mead. Armstrong went on to become the only man ever to hold three world championships simultaneously.

Alex Carrasquel Misses the Boat; Will Fly to Camp

By the Associated Press

Caracas, Venezuela, March 13.—Pitcher Alejandro Carrasquel, who planned to sail today for the United States to join the Washington Senators in spring training, was unable to make the boat and said he would leave Saturday by plane for Miami, Fla.

He was to have reported to the club February 20 when other batterymen began practice at Orlando, Fla., and the Senators imposed a $100 fine on him for not reporting on time.

Lady Wrestlers Intrigue Post Correspondents at Turner's

Patsy Miller Tosses Bessie Forbes and Joe Cox Scores Over Lou Plummer

By Walter (Half-Nelson) Haight

I guess it beats bending over a hot stove all day but it looks like a helluva way to make a living. I mean this business of lady wrestlers working their figures to the bone. But sorority sisters of the mat pull more hair than punches and there's nothing half-way about the way they perform. They really battle for keeps and pile each other up in heaps.

I don't want to get too involved before giving the results, so: Patsy Miller, of Texas, used an airplane spin and a body slam to defeat Bessie Forbes, of Georgia, in 11 minutes, and Joe Cox threw the arena at Lou Plummer and pinned him with a body press in 19 minutes.

Natie Brown, at the ringside, had to supply the cauliflower ears for the gals match but they packed all the tricks known to the masculine species. They went in for body slams that jingled the box office change, took toe holds that looked like amputations in the making and served punch of the five-knuckle brand.

Bessie played the role of Grandma Wolf to Patsy's Red Riding Hood, only when it came time for Bessie to say "all the better to eat you with" Patsy took matters in her own hands, swung Bessie on her shoulders and dropped her in a heap. Patsy pounced on her rival and Bessie said uncle or aunt or whatever lady wrestlers say when they mean enough.

Joe Cox and Lou Plummer acted as though they were allergic to the mat. They spent most of their 19 minutes of assorted action on the wrong side of the ropes with spectators hangin' on their ears. However, it was all in good fun and Cox's victory was a pleasing one because Plummer is the word for horrid at Turner's Arena.

Villian Hornet

The Green Hornet, called "Hairnet" by the ringside superintendents' association, stung Paul Boech and the people's choice gave up on a leg lock. The Hornet made himself extremely unpopular from the start with alleged foul tactics, if it is necessary to use alleged in refering to a wrestler. He kneed, slugged, punched and poked Boech who specialized in pulling his foe's mask over his face. In fact, had Boech twisted Brother Hornet's nose as much as he did that knitted hood, the mysterious one probably would be wearing his probiscis (snozzle to you) tied around his neck on a ribbon.

The other two bouts were on the tame side, as wrestling these days goes. Milo Steinborn gained a victory over Pierre DeGlance on a bear hug. Len Maculso and Joe DeValteau drew in 30 minutes and the latter, a Frenchman, was so pleased with the half loaf that he kissed his opponent, the referee, the announcer, and I moved when he came toward the pressbox.

But remember, there was no kissing after that girls' match. Not even a thrown one.

Joe Turner started a collection for the Police Boys Club with a crisp $100 bill and the crowd tossed $90 worth of change into the ring for the same worthy cause.

Jockey Eads, Recently Injured, Leaves Hospital

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., March 13.—One of the winter racing season's bad spills ended happily today when Jockey Wendell Eads was discharged from University Hospital.

Eads, the leading apprentice rider through the early part of the Florida season, was hurt with Jockey Ted Atkinson last week at Tropical Park in a mixup near the finish of a race.

Physicians feared at first that Eads, unconscious several hours, had been critically injured but later examination disclosed only a concussion and bruises. Atkinson's injuries were minor.

Eads will remain here until the Calumet Farms Stable moves its horses into Kentucky, and will return to the saddle there.

Bruins Five Books Sphas March 26

The Washington Bruins, colored professional cagers, made three announcements last night, two concerning coming games and the third having to do with the signing of a second new player within a week.

Bruin officials made public the listing of the Philadelphia Sphas, American Professional League champions, for a game at Turner's Arena on March 26. At the same time they revealed that they have acquired Bricktop Wright, former Lincoln University captain and star and last year a member of the crack Harlem Yankee aggregation. Later in the evening the Bruins announced they had succeeded in carding the Atlantic City Rovers for Sunday's attraction at the Arena. The Atlantic City outfit was booked when the Fordham Flashes were compelled to cancel.

Three Fordham regulars were stricken with influenza early this week and Manager Jack Schneider wired the Bruin management that he preferred to cancel than bring in a makeshift team. The Rovers boast a loss and an overtime win over the Flashes this year and were recommended by Schneider.

Wisconsin is the Big Ten champion, Dartmouth the Eastern intercollegiate winner, and North Carolina, Southeast Conference titlist.

The winner of the Eastern division playoff will meet the Western division champions at Kansas City March 29.

Capital Store Sales Off 3% In Snow Week

Washington department store sales dipped 3 per cent in the week ended March 8, the first decline this year as compared with 1940. However, cumulative sales for the four weeks ended March 8 remained 10 per cent above the like 1940, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

The sales dip was far less than had been anticipated here. Local observers pointed out that Washington had its most severe snowstorm of the winter late last week.

Other cities of the Fifth Federal Reserve district showed sharper declines. The Reserve district as a whole outside of Baltimore and Washington showed a 15 per cent slump in sales while Baltimore experienced a 5 per cent drop.

Nationally, department store sales in the week ended March 8, the Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday, were even with the corresponding week last year.

In the week ended March 1 sales had been 5 per cent above a year ago, and in the four weeks ended March 8 they averaged 7 per cent above the similar period last year.

By Federal Reserve districts, comparisons of the one week ended March 8 and the corresponding week last week were:

Increases—Cleveland, 1; Atlanta, 3; Chicago, 4; Dallas, 1, and San Francisco, 6 per cent.

Decreases—Boston, 3; New York, 2; Philadelphia, 18, and Kansas 2 per cent.

The District of Columbia and five neighboring States will be represented in Philadelphia. The winner of the district contest will be sent to California to compete in the national contest June next for the A. P. Giannini educational endowment prizes.

Brokers To Hear Martin

Washington brokers and financial men have been invited to attend a banquet session March 21 of the Baltimore Cashiers Association at which William McC. Martin, president of the New York Stock Exchange, is scheduled to speak.

Mr. Martin, the first salaried president of the Big Board, announced a short time ago that he would resign as head of the exchange upon his induction into military service which is expected some time in May.

In a valedictory address, Mr. Martin recently blamed the inactivity of stock trading on conditions brought about the war, the tax situation and the "unintelligent administration of the Securities and Exchange Act."

Auto Assemblies Increase in Week

Detroit, March 13 (AP).—The trade paper Automotive News, in a routine survey of automobile factory activity, estimated today that this week's assemblies of passenger cars and trucks would total 126,773 units, compared with 125,387 last week and 110,199 this week a year ago.

It attributed the slight increase to the resumption of operations at Willys, which was idle in the previous week.

General Motors production this week is placed at 53,623 units, compared with 54,620 last week; Chrysler output aat 29,680, compared with 29,553 last week, and Ford assemblies at 26,660, compared with 26,695 a week ago.

Cotton Futures

New York, March 13 (AP).—Cotton futures closed 1 to 6 points higher today, holding only a part of extreme gains.

Tapering of values in the late trading was accelerated by profit selling based on reports of freer offerings of the staple in Eastern sections of the belt.

Most encouraging to bullish forces was further evidence of broadening of the Worth Street market for cotton fabrics. Buying interest was active throughout the cloth division and full asking prices were maintained.

Sugar Futures

New York, March 13 (AP).—All divisions of the sugar market rolled up new price gains today.

Raws advanced 2 points on a sale of 1,700 tons Philippines, due late in April, at 3.27 cents.

Demand for refined sugar was reported large in the face of the latest price lift to 4.85 cents.

Rising shipping rates and a theory expanded theaters of war might lead eventually to supply problems in some areas were underlying factors.

Domestic contracts climbed 2 to 3 points on transfers of 23,300 tons. The world contracts closed 3½ to 4 points higher on sales of 9,950 tons.

Rail Loadings Show Slight Dip

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 741,922 cars of revenue freight were loaded during the week ended last Saturday.

This was a decrease of 14,748 cars, or 1.9 per cent, compared with the preceding week, an increase of 121,326, or 19.5 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 153,496, or 26.1 per cent, compared with 1939.

The decline in loadings was contrary to the normal seasonal tendency and was caused, it was believed, by severe weather conditions over a large section of the East. All classes of freight except ore declined moderately.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 13 (AP).—A short-lived attempt to check the recent reaction of wheat prices collapsed today after quotations had been pushed up as much as 1¾ cents from early lows.

Buying of professional and milling interests, stimulated partly by the sharp premiums quoted for cash wheat, rallied prices after mid-sessions, but the gains were wiped out in a renewal of profit-taking and selling late in the session. Wheat closed ½-¾ lower than yesterday, May, 85¾@85⅝; July, 82¼@82.

Part of the selling was associated with continued weakness of Winnipeg wheat, which declined ⅝-¾ cent on top of losses of about a cent yesterday, following announcement of the 1941 Canadian wheat program. While this program will limit Canadian acreage and producers' marketings to 230,000,000 bushels, the basic wheat board price of 70 cents will not be changed.

Corn closed unchanged to ⅛ higher, May 62⅝@62½, July 62⅜; oats unchanged to ¼ off; soybeans ⅝-¾ higher; rye ⅝ lower to ⅛ higher, and lard unchanged to 3 higher.

Bank Excess Reserves Rise $40,000,000

By the Associated Press

The Federal Reserve Board estimated yesterday that lendable excess reserves of banks increased $40,000,000 to a total of $6,480,000,000 in the week ended March 12.

The increase was atiributed primarily to Treasury gold purchases.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended March 12 member bank reserve balances increased $75,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from increases of $81,000,000 in gold stock, $7,000,000 in reserve bank credit, and $3,000,000 in Treasury currency, and a decrease of $24,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal reserve accounts, offset in part by increases of $30,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, $6,000,000 in money in circulation, and $4,000,000 in Treasury cash. Excess reserves of member banks on March 12 were estimated to be approximately $6,480,000,000, an increase of $40,000,000 for the week."

Stocks Close With Fractional Recessions; Shipbuilding, Rail Shares Hold Steady

New York, March 13.—Stock market prices again wavered in the latter part of today's session after an early attempt to attract buyers met with only mild success.

A few shipbuilding and specialty issues managed to step out in front in hte forenoon but most of these packed away at the close. Declines of fractions to a point or so were well in the majority at the sound of the final gong.

Volume dwindled as quotations faded and transfers for the full proceedings amounted to 339,050 shares, smallest five-hour turnover since March 5. They compared with 461,000 yesterday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .3 of a point at 41.4, largest recession since March 3

Actual bearish news was scare, and the huge defense spending program remained as a buying argument, brokers said. Worries over soaring taxes to meet the multibillion armaments bill, however, apparently proved an important handicap. In addition, some of the pessimism was attributed to spreading strikes and threats of a labor rift in the steel industry. All of this, plus fears adverse war news might provide market shocks, tended to accentuate the conservatism of speculative and investment forces.

Rails maintatined a fairly steady demeanor despite today's summary of last week's freight loadings, disclosing a contra-seasonal drop. The moderate set-back from the preceding week was believed due almost entirely to the heaviest snow storms in the East for the past six years.

An assortment of cheerful earnings statements brought in bidding for individual stocks but profits showings for some corporations in 1940 made relatively poor comparisons with 1939.

On the losing side were shares of United States Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown sheet, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Sears Roebuck, J. I. Case, International Harvester, American Telephone, American Smelting, Santa Fe, General Electric, Du Pont, Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, New York Shipbuilding, Bath Iron Works and Western Union. Universal Pictures preferred, a recent climber, fell 5 points on a few sales.

Clinging to advances were Great Northern, Continental Westinghouse, American Can, Montgomery Ward and Glenn Martin.

Persistent strength in import commodities, with the exception of cocoa and coffee, was a sustaining influence for securities. Grains were a bit shaky. Wheat at Chicago was off ⅛ to ⅜ of a cent a bushel and corn unchanged to up ¼. Cotton gained 5 to 30 cents a bale. Bonds were mixed.

On the offside in the Curb were Creole Petroleum, Bell Aircraft, American Cyanamid "B" and Niagara Hudson Power. Up a trifle were Humble Oil, Glen Alden Coal, Sherwin Williams and N. J. Zinc. Transactions of around 81,000 shares about equalled those of Wednesday.

Robert Baker, of WJSV's sales promotion department and as generally philanthropic a young gentleman as you can find in the whole of that department, would like to have it known that anyone reading this stands just as good a chance as anyone else reading this of winning a thousand dollars within the next few weeks.

It's in connection with a program which, oddly enough, you hear over WJSV every day in the week, called "Myrt and Marge" and sponsored in the interest of Super Suds by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet.

The contest, which consists of writing 25 words or less, beginning "I like Super Suds because . . ." is to net contestants throughout the country $100,000 in United States Savings Bonds. There's a weekly grand prize of $1,000; 25 second prizes of $100 and 500 third prizes of $25, a total of 526 each week until the contest closes on March 31.

A nice little fillip is added in that we are assured that neatness, grammar and spelling do not count in the judging. After the entries are received, it seems, they are typed on blank cards with no identification except a code number and the Super Suds judgments are kept clean accordingly. The entry blanks can be obtained from any grocer and you can enter as many of them as you like.

Robert assures us that full details, any odds and ends that we've failed to mention, can be got by listening to "Myrt and Marge" any time this month.

Under the auspices of The Post, WJSV and the American Legion, with the American Contract Bridge League as national sponsor, the blood and serum bank fund is profiting also by the sale of tickets for the Connecticut Avenue Association's style show which will be given at the Hotel Mayflower today.

Financial receipts from all tickets bought from The Post, whether in person or by mail, will be applied to the fund in their entirety.

Barracks and Mess Halls for 29th Completed at Fort Meade; Camp to Be Ready for First Selectees April 1, Maj. Noxon Says

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Correspondent

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 13.—All barracks and mess halls in the Twenty-ninth Division cantonment have been completed and are ready for occupancy, Maj. James A. Noxon, constructing quartermaster, said today.

By April 1, when the division will receive its first quotas of Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania selectees, the entire camp will be finished, Maj. Noxon added. This will include two theaters and the large service club, which will serve as a recreation hut and hostess house for the division.

With completion of the camp's housing facilities, more than 1,100 buildings have been erected and equipped with heating, lighting and plumbing facilities in less than five months. Many regimental recreation buildings are now being used for schools, though the 176th Infantry (Virginia) this week took over its recreation hall and tonight held a concert there by the regimental band.

Roads are still in critical condition despite constant scraping and filling. Final stabilization of the roads will not be attempted, however, Maj. Noxon said, until after the spring rains.

Division Headquarters today issued orders reducing the speed limit ono all roads within the cantonment to 20 miles an hour and requiring vehicles entering main roads from side roads to come to a full stop. These regulations, the order said, were necessitated by the "increasing number of accidents and near-accidents" in the division area.

Twelve Washington soldiers were promoted in orders issued today by the 104th Quartermaster Regiment. The men were:

Sergt. John M. Crandall, promoted to staff sergeant; Corpls. Jesse A. Warvin, Robert F. Young and James R. Welch, to sergeants, and Privates First Class William M. Groark and Reginald M. Russell and Private Edward W. Hilderbrandt to corporals, all in Company A. Sergt. Ralph B. Von Guerard was made staff sergeant in Company B. In the Service Company, Private First Class Joe L. Miller and Privates Milford S. Twilley, David Weinstein and Henry B. Mohler were named corporals.

Maj. John T. O'Neill, of Washington; Maj. William N. Briscoe, of Baltimore, and Maj. Robert W. Rogers, of Richmond, were appointed summary courts in the regiment.

Today the District's 121st Engineers, commanded by Col. John W. Oehmann, gave the 30 students in its pioneer course for infantry officers a demonstration of crossing a stream in assault boats. The demonstration was made in high wind and driving snow at Indian Landing Boat Club on the Severn River, 9 miles from Fort Meade.

Tactics Explained

Capt. P. C. Conlyn, commanding Company E, who was in charge of the demonstration detail, explained that assault boats are used to ferry infantry across streams to gain a foothold for a bridgehead. The assault boat crossing, he said, usually is made with great secrecy at night and is followed by footbridges and heavy pontoon bridges.

After several crossings from shore to an island over 300 yards of water, the infantry officers were told off into parties of nine each and permitted to make the crossing themselves with two engineers in each boat. The boats, made of waterproof plywood, weigh 200 pounds and carry 11 men. They are built so they can be nested in trucks for road transport.

Col. D. John Markey, commanding Maryland's 115th Infantry, said today that 491 men of his regiment had registered for non-military night instruction courses. In addition, he said, 25 men have registered for "cultural courses" within the regiment, including such subjects as arithmetic, history, American and English literature and short story writing.

Of the 491 indicating a desire to attend the division classes, 173 wish to study welding. In other courses, 50 sought general clerical training, 17 tool and die work, 72 carburetor, ignition and radio, 28 Spanish, 20 teacher training, 62 auto mechanics and 69 diesel mechanics. Instructors in the smaller regimental courses will include Sergt. H. F. Browne, Silver Spring, arithmetic, and Pvt. James W. Schell, of Frederick, Md., elementary psychology. Non-military educational activities in the regiment are being directed by Capt. Frank Lambert, senior chaplain. Chaplain Lambert was rector of Christ Episcopal Church, Cambridge, Md., and was a World War flier attached to a bomber squadron in Italy.

Wicomico Budget Increased $21,460

Salisbury, Md., March 13 (AP).—A $21,460 increase in the costs of the Wicomico County school system has been reported in the 1941-42 budget now under consideration by the county commissioners.

Equalization of white and colored teachers' salaries, required by law, accounts for a major portion of the increase, about $2,000 of which would be borne by the county.

Trainees Are Really Ill In This Army Hospital

Camp Wolters, Tex., March 13 (AP).—This Army camp's hospital is complete and its 50 beds are occupied by ailing trainees.

But male attendants administer to their needs while the camp's contingent of feminine nurses mark time at nearby Mineral Wells.

The reason:

No window shades have been supplied for the nurses' camp quarters.
